COURT SPARES HIM, BUT MOB LYNCHES HIM

CHARTER SPECIAL TRAIN

GOVERNOR TO PROSECUTE

Victim Was Convicted of Murder, Then Freed by Technicality.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MONROE, La., May 29.—R. T. Rogers, a white man, once convicted of the murder of Jesse Brown, was taken last night from the Madison Parish Jail at Tallulah by a mob and hanged to a telegraph pole.

It is said that the mob went from this city on a special train over the V. S. & P. Railroad and numbered about twenty-five men; that they forced the Jail, secured the prisoner, accomplished their work before their presence was known or any alarm could be given and departed as they came.

There was no excitement whatever. The execution was orderly and quiet, and no other lawlessness of any kind was committed.

It is true that the train was made up in Monroe, but that the mob was organized here and composed of Monroe people is stoutly denied. The supposition is that the men were picked up at stations along the road in this and Richland Parishes, where the murdered man had relatives and friends and was well known.

Tallulah is 55 miles east of Monroe and 21 miles west of Vicksburg, Miss.

Gov. Blanchard Acts.

It is understood that Gov. Blanchard has been communicated with ae Baton Rouge and that he has asked that the grand jury be called immediately in special session. It is reporeed that the names of nearly all the mob members have been secured and that a vigorous prosecution will be instituted.

The murder of which Rogers was charged occurred on the night of Feb. 19, 1904.

The murdered man was a merchant of Girard, La., a small town 18 miles east of here. He slept in a room in the rear of his store. The store was broken open and he was shot to death as he slept. The bedding was set afire to burn the house down and conceal the crime.

"Some months elapsed before any clew was obtained. It came through a letter from a negro accomplice, who had fled to Mississippi. He wrote a friend at Girard giving details of the murder, and the letter was delivered by mistake to another person, who turned it over to Dr. F. A. Brown of this city, a brother of the murdered man. The arrest of Rogers and two other white men, Ryan Henderson and R. W. Womack, followed.

Verdict Set Aside.

A severance was granted and Rogers was placed on trial. He was found guilty and sentenced to be hanged. An appeal was taken. The State Supreme Court set aside the verdict and ordered a new trial.

A change of venue was asked and granted and the case was transferred to Madison Parish. The jury was impaneled and the evidence begun when the trial judge, F. X. Ransdell of Lake the trial Judge, F. X. Randell of Lake Providence, a brother of Congressman Jos. E. Ransdell, received a telegram announcing the death of a member of his family. He ordered the jury locked up and adjourned court. Subsequently he ordered the jury discharged and a mistrial entered.

Attorneys for the defendant, on recall of the case, entered a plea of former jeopardy, which was sustained and the prisoner was ordered discharged. The State appealed from this ruling and it was pending its decision by the Supreme Court that the prisoner was lynched.

The two other prisoners, Henderson and Womack, are in jail at Shreveport for safekeeping. The negro accomplice on whose evidence Rogers was convicted at the first trial, was guaranteed immunity from prosecution.

MRS. GELBART WEDS.

Mrs. Selma Gelbart, divorced wife of Attorney Sigmund Gelbart, was married Monday to Robert Diamont at St. Charles. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert McIlroy of the Methodist Church.

Diamont, who is a member of the Germania Theater Stock Co., is known to theater goers as Ernest Robert. His name was mentioned in the Gelbart divorce case and he figured in stormy meetings between Mr. and Mrs. Gelbart. Recently he was present at a pistol episode in a downtown office building, in which the lawyer and his divorced wife took part.

Diamont and Mrs. Gelbart, accompanied by Architect Henning and a Miss Stevens, went to St. Charles on a street car. Mrs. Gelbart was attired in black, "symbolizing the death of the past," she explained. The party was in good humor, carrying on the conversation in German.

When the license was issued the couple went in search of the residence of Rector Friedrich of the Episcopal Church, but were told that he would not marry divorcees. Pastor McIlroy performed the ceremony and the party boarded a car for St. Louis.

"Lid" Cases Are Heard.

The Jefferson Club "lid" cases, which have been pending for two months, were heard Tuesday by ex-Lieutenant-Governor Charles P. Johnson, acting Judge in the Court of Criminal Correction, in the place of Judge Moore, who, being a member of the club, disqualified himself. Joseph Canty and Jack Sheppard were charged with violating the Sunday-closing law. Gov. Johnson overruled Attorney Campbell's demurrer to the State's evidence, and announced that he would render a written opinion next Thursday.

ACCUSED LABOR LEADERS DEMAND ANOTHER JUDGE

ATTACK GOV. GOODING

CENSURE JURY SYSTEM

Defendants Declare Method of Selecting Grand Inquisition Unjust.

CALDWELL, Idaho, May 29.—When the Canyon County District Court convened here this forenoon, the cases of Charles H. Moyer, William D. Haywood and George A. Pettibone, officers of the Western Federation of Miners, who are charged with the murder of former Gov. Frank Steunenberg, were called.

Attorneys for the prisoners immediately filed notice of alleged disqualifications which should prevent District Judge Frank Smith from sitting as trial Judge, and gave notice of a motion for a change of venue.

Twenty-six reasons which are alleged to disqualify Judge Smith are given. Among other points it is alleged that Gov. Frank R. Gooding has issued a public manifesto declaring the guilt of the defendants and that he has proof of their guilt.

The fact that Judge Smith is an appointee of the Governor is set forth and the allegation that he is subject to the influence of the Governor is made. The manner of drawing the grand jury in this county also is attacked.

THOUGHT DEAD, SHE LIVES

Therefore Suit Over Residence Park Is Renewed.

Judge McElhinney at Clayton has granted a new trial in the case of Leonard D. Groves and others against Albert T. Terry and others, in which the title to 28 acres of land in Overland Park is to be determined.

The new trial was granted on the ground that in the decision which was made vesting the property in Terry a mistake was made in the statement of facts filed by the attorneys for both sides in the presumption that Mrs. Mary Todd, wife of Albert Todd, who at one time owned the property, was dead. It has since been learned that she is living, but is a non-resident.

The defendants have taken an appeal from Judge McElhinney's ruling to the Supreme Court.

MRS. PEUGNET CALLS HUSBAND "PUNK" IN NOTE

DISLIKED HER FRIENDS

NIGHT RIDE IN CARRIAGE

Six in Vehicle and Mrs. Peugnet Sat on Man's Lap, Says Witness.

That he was called "Punk" by his young wife is the latest grievance which the elderly Capt. Ernest Peugnet has presented in his suit for divorce against Alexina Louise Peugnet. She is the former typewriter girl in the Boatmen's Bank who recently filed a cross-bill denying all the allegations in her husband's petition and charging him with cruelty and violation of the marital vows.

That the term was not used as one of endearment he hopes to show by its context in a letter introduced in depositions taken by her attorneys. Mr. Peugnet was represented by her attorneys when the depositions were taken.

William Price, a private detective living at 3205 Lawton avenue, testified to having gone to a house at 720 Leonard avenue on Feb. 7, 1906, with Capt. Ernest Peugnet and L. B. Peugnet, the Captain's son. Price said: "As soon as the Captain saw his wife he began abusing her and remarked that he ought to put a bullet into her on account of the way he had treated her and the way she treated him.

"After that remark he became pretty feeble and we thought he was going to faint, so a few minutes later we left the house, leaving the woman there alone. She was in a back room upstairs, sitting in a rocking chair facing the door from which the husband was talking to her."

Price testified that there was no man in the room.

Made Many Acquaintances.

Miss Sadie Lee Albertson of 5641 Clemens avenue, stepdaughter of Frederick K. Jones, auditor of the Sligo Furnace Co., in her depositions told of having been acquainted with Mrs. Peugnet and of having gone to Put-In-Bay, Ohio, in the summer, 1905, with Capt. Peugnet at the invitation of Mrs. Peugnet. They stayed 10 days at the Beebe House, and she said that she left there with Capt. Peugnet at his suggestion because he did not care to leave the witness there on account of his wife's conduct.

"She was very familiar with people she picked up," testified Miss Albertson, "people she did not know and people Mr. Peugnet did not approve of. As soon as she became acquainted with any lady up there she would bring them and introduce them to Mr. Peugnet, and he did not approve of them."

"How about men? What were her relations there with men?"

"I never saw her do anything myself except to be jolly."

"Where did you meet Mrs. Peugnet?" she was asked.

"At the hotel," she answered.

"Did you have any talk with her about where she had come from that morning?"

"She said she had been at Sandusky and she did not think Capt. Peugnet would like it. She was there with some one, but I don't remember who."

Ride in Crowded Carriage.

"Do you remember her saying anything about her being at Sandusky on that occasion with a man who was in the chinaware business?"

"She said she know someone who was in the chinaware business, but I don't remember whether she had been with him on that occasion."

"What did she tell you, if anything, about her relations and how familiar she was with gentlemen up there, young or old men?"

"Well, I know that she knew some gentlemen up there very well, but I don't know whether she knew them intimately or not."

Miss Albertson told of having gone home from the Veiled Prophet's ball in October, 1905, with Mrs. Peugnet in a crowded carriage. She was asked who was in the carriage and she answered:

"Well, my step-father, Mr. Jones, Mr. Estell McHenry and a little friend of mine, Mrs. Rodney Jones, Mrs. Peugnet, Mr. Chouteau and myself."

"Do you know Mr. Chouteau's first name?"

"Mr. Pierre Chouteau," was the answer.

"What did you notice about Mrs. Peugnet's conduct in the carriage?"

"There were six of us in the carriage. Sitting on one side of the carriage was Mr. Estell McHenry, my little friend, Mrs. Jones and myself. On the other side was my stepfather, Mrs. Peugnet and Mr. Chouteau. Mrs. Peugnet sat on Mr. Chouteau's lap in the carriage from the Planters Hotel out to my house on Clemens avenue. We first stopped at the St. Louis Club to let Mr. McHenry out, and then we drove out to my house. My little friend, Mrs. Jones, got out with us.

"Mrs. Peugnet returned home with Mr. Chouteau in the carriage. This was about 3 o'clock in the morning."

St. Louisan in Boston.

"Did Mrs. Peugnet tell you anything about an incident that happened in Boston?"

"She told me that she was there with a St. Louis man in the corridor of the hotel and I think she met a man by the name of Cramm, or something like that, and the St. Louisan took her to the elevator and left her there. She did not want to be seen with the St. Louisan."

Witness gave the name of a man of prominent family as the St. Louisan.

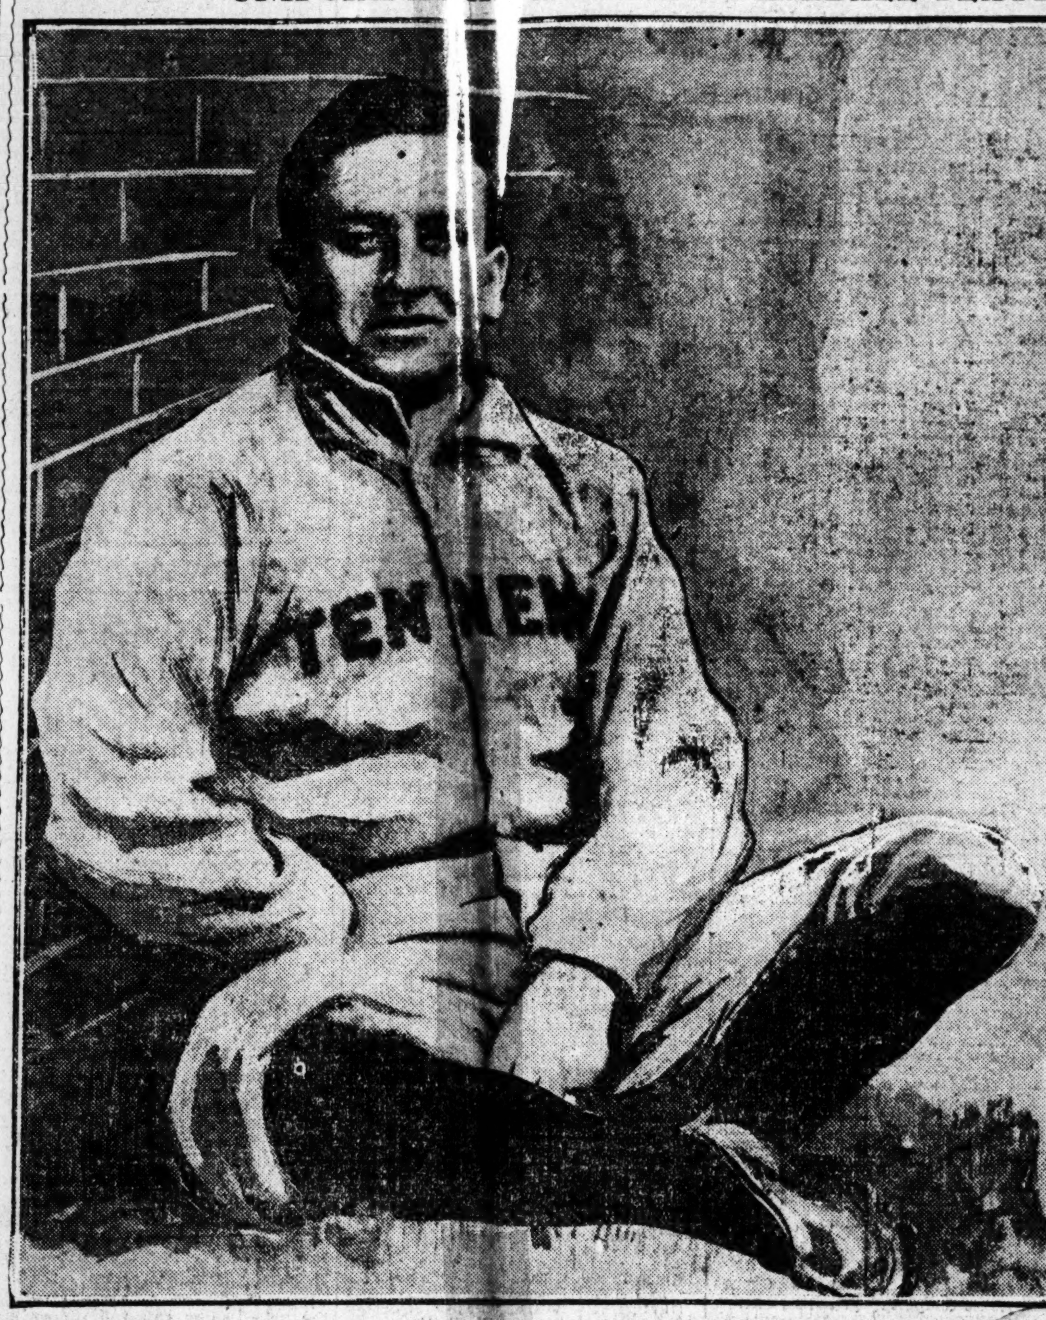

"What, if anything, about traveling in the East with any gentlemen other than her husband on that trip?"

"She simply said in one of her letters that she had met this St. Louisan."

"Was he in Put-in-Bay while you

JACK TENNENT AS HE APPEARED IN HIS UNIFORM AS AN AMATEUR BASEBALL PLAYER

Jack Tennent was well known to the devotees of amateur baseball in St. Louis. For years the Tennent Shoe Co. was represented in amateur ranks by a team under the sole direction of Jack. Last year his team entered the Business Men's League, of which he was elected president. Jack played first base and was manager. The Tennent nine easily won the 1905 pennant.

Doing one thing at a time was always his way on the ball field and whatever he did while directing his players he did well. When he was not playing he was on the coaching lines, kept things moving and was the life of the game.

He particularly shone as a pinch hitter, his splendid physique and great strength giving him an advantage at the bat that stood his team in good stead at many a crucial moment. If the inning was the ninth and the score close, Tennent would frequently take out the hitter, march to the plate and slam out a single, just when it was most needed. Several of the boys that Tennent played baseball with are now in minor leagues, Schirm and Alred playing with the Southern League, Krehmeyer with Belleville.

BRUTALITY TO A CHILD CAUSE OF ITS DEATH

BODY BADLY BRUISED

Lad Said Wounds Were Caused by Being Thrown Upon Wire Fence.

A case of shocking brutality is being investigated by the police following the death at the City Hospital of Johnnie Rathmann, 4 years old. The child is a son of Joseph Rathmann, who boards at 1850 South Ninth street.

The boy and his brother had been boarding with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hertel of 155 Lemay Ferry road, Luxembourg, who took him to the hospital Sunday.

Johnnie died in great pain Monday afternoon. He was taken to the hospital early Sunday, and, when the nurses undressed him, they found his body covered with bruises and jagged wounds which were beginning to heal. Some them appeared to be from burns. Johnnie could not explain the burns, but he said the cuts were caused by being thrown from a window upon a barbed wire fence. His father visited him the hospital and seemed shocked and grieved to learn his condition.

The little fellow was half delirious when taken to the hospital, but he rallied temporarily under treatment adn stammered a fairly coherent account of how he received the scars. Whenever Johnnie was whipped he was stripped and the lash applied to his nude body, he said. He told of being thrown from a window against what he called a "sticky fence," and shook his head when asked if a doctor had been called to dress the cuts.

Johnnie's chapter of troubles began some time after marital disagreements between his young parents. Joseph Rathmann, the father, is a brewery worker, 24 years old. His wife, Elizabeth, is 22. They were married seven years ago, when both were little more than children, and have another son, Eddie, 6 years old.

Rathmann and his wife separated a year ago. For a time the boys were cared for by Mrs. Lena Simon of 1850 South Ninth street, with whom Rathmann boarded. Seven weeks ago they were given into the care of Mrs. Frances Hertel and her husband, who live in Luxembourg, a suburb south of Carondelet.

HALLUCINATIONS ONLY

Child Wife, Accused of Murder, Begged to Be Spared From Asylum.

NEW YORK, May 29.—The trial of Josephine Terranova, charged with the murder of her aunt, Mrs. Concetta Reggio, was resumed today.

The commission appointed to ascertain whether Mrs. Terranova is insane reported to the Court that, while the girl formerly had hallucinations as to her conduct in killing her uncle and aunt, and still has them, she is able, in their opinion, to consult and advise with her counsel as to the conduct of her trial.

As such a condition satisfied the requirements of the law, the trial proceeded.

The three commissioners appointed by Judge Scott to determine on Josephine's sanity finished late yesterday afternoon, having examined all the medical experts and the girl. Before the girl was taken from the courtroom she stretched out her arms and cried to the commissioners:

"For God's sake, are you going to send me to an insane asylum, when I have talked to you as any sensible woman ever talked to men? Are you really going to do that, after the way I have proved to you that I am as sane as any woman in the world?"

The child wife was haggard and nervous after the painful physical tests to which she was subjected. Wounds showed where her skin had been pierced and one side of her face was swollen.

TENNENT CARRIED DEADLY ACID WEEK BEFORE DRINKING IT

Former Secretary and Son of the Founder of Pioneer Shoe Company Which Failed Recently Drank Carbolic Acid at His Father's Home in Webster Groves.

HIS HOME BROKEN UP BY FINANCIAL CRASH

He Returned From Texas Sunday Night, Did Not See Young Wife at Her Mother's Home and Was Found Dying in Bed the Next Morning.

After carrying a bottle of carbolic acid with him for a week, "Jack" Tennent, son of the founder of the Tennent Shoe Co., which recently collapsed, entailing a total loss to stockholders and creditors of approximately a million dollars, drank the poison at the home of his father in Webster Groves. He was unconscious when his groans called relatives to his bedside, and he died in a few minutes without speaking.

The poison with which the young man ended his life was bought in Waco, Tex., while he was there on a trip for the firm for which he has recently been traveling. He arrived in St. Louis Sunday evening and ended his life 12 hours later without seeing his young wife, from whom he had been estranged, according to friends of the family, ever since the revelations made in connection with the shoe company's sensational failure.

Jack Tennet was well known in St. Louis, where he was born and reared. Since he entered business he has been active in social and club life and was a familiar figure in the gayest circles of the city. Handsome, talented, good-natured, he was popular and well liked and hundreds of friends are grieved at the tragedy that comes as an incident of the failure of the concern that was for 40 years one of the leading shoe manufacturing firms in St. Louis.

The young wife is prostrated by the death of her husband and his aged father and mother are also ill from grief. They deny themselves except to their closest relatives and refuse to discuss the tragedy.

Since Jack Tennent lost the income he had as secretary of the shoe company he has had a position as traveling salesman for a shoe company at Richmond, Va. He knew the shoe business and was fairly successful as a salesman. But he was unacquainted in the territory to which he was assigned—Texas—and his income was not as large as he had formerly enjoyed. When his home was broken up his wife went to live with her brother, George C. Scott, at the McPherson avenue address where her mother also lived.

Tennent's father and mother moved to a modest home in Webster Groves, giving up their fine home at 4140 Washington boulevard. Jack called his father's home his home, and when he was in St. Louis he stayed at the Webster Groves house.

Reached St. Louis Sunday.

Sunday evening Jack reached St. Louis on his way to Richmond. His firm had instructed him to return for a new line of samples, and for new instructions, and he stopped off in St. Louis on his way to Richmond.

The young man went to his father's home at Webster Groves and spent Sunday evening talking with his father and mother and with Mrs. Maria Johnson, Mrs. Tennant's aunt, who lives with them. He seemed to be in his usual cheerful spirits and talked encouragingly about his business prospects and the future outlook. He retired rather late, occupying a room on the third floor.

Monday morning Mrs. Johnson, whose room was directly below the one occupied by Jack, heard groans coming from his room. She thought that he had a nightmare and she went upstairs to waken him. When she entered his room she found him in bed, unconscious.

Mrs. Johnson gave the alarm and a hurried call was sent to Dr. Howard Carter. When the physician reached the house he found that life was extinct. He so informed the family and then notified Coroner Koch of St. Louis County.

Dead When Doctor Arrived.

Dr. Carter said Tuesday that when he went to the Tennent home he was shown to the bedroom occupied by the young man and found him in bed dressed in his night garments. The body was quite warm but there were no signs of life.

"I did not see any glass, cup or bottle in the room," said Dr. Carter, "and did not notice any evidences of poison at first. Then I noticed that the lips were burned and I detected the odor of carbolic acid. There was nothing further I could do and I went away, notifying Coroner Koch as soon as possible by telephone."

Coroner Koch went to Webster Groves and interviewed the family and physician. Before ending his life the young man had written no notes so far as known and had given no inkling of his intention of taking poison.

The marriage of Jack Tennent and Miss May Scott took place 11 years ago, when he was 21 and she was 17. She had been one of the most popular girls at the Mary Institute. Their courtship was brief but romantic.

After their marriage they went to live at 4206 Maryland avenue and there their baby, now a sturdy youngster of 9 and named for his father and grandfather, was born. The young couple took part in many of the social affairs of the city and were universally popular.

Mrs. Tennent's brother, George C. Scott, was married to a daughter of Corwin H. Spencer and for years Mr. and Mrs. Tennent were the life of the circle in which they moved.

Jack Tennent was devoted to outdoor sports. He was an enthusiastic baseball "fan" and was an excellent amateur player. When automobiling became popular he bought a high-power machine in which he was often seen and in which his friends had many delightful outings.

Mr. and Mrs. Tennent seemed devoted to each other and their estrangement was a surprise to their friends, who believed that it was temporary and was due to Mr. Tennent's altered financial conditions. Soon after the collapse of the Tennent concern the young man told a reporter for the Post-Dispatch that he was absolutely penniless and that he must seek a position somewhere.

Said Things Would Be All Right.

When he got the position his wife lived for a time at the Maryland avenue home and then went to live with her brother. She met an old friend on the street a few days ago and spoke about her troubles. This friend, who did not wish his name used, said Tuesday that Mrs. Tennent spoke hopefully of the future.

"We have had a lot of trouble," she said, "but things are looking brighter now and I think they will soon come out all right."

She gave the impression that she expected to be reconciled to her husband, though she did not say so directly. Her son, John H. Tennent III has been living with his mother.

A reporter for the Post-Dispatch called at the Scott home Tuesday and saw Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Jack Tennent's sister-in-law. He was told that Mrs. Tennent was too ill to be seen, but took a message to her mother, Mrs. Scott. When the younger Mrs. Scott returned she said:

"We cannot discuss this deplorable event and we can't talk about the domestic afairs of the young couple. Please just say that Mr. Tennant ended his life because of business troubles. The family has suffered a great deal recently, and the less said about the matter the better we will all be pleased."

Young Mrs. Tennent has been living with her brother and sister-in-law for about three weeks.

Young Tennent, who was named after his father, John H. Tennent, was born in St. Louis in 1874 and was educated here. After finishing school he became an employe and later an officer in the Tennent Shoe Company and remained with that concern until its collapse a few months ago.

Explanation of Over-Drafts.

At the time of the failure the statement was made that Jack Tennent's account with the concern was overdrawn to the amount of $20,000. Young Tennent at that time admitted that he had drawn money in excess of his salary, which was not large enough to enable him to support his family. But he denied that the sum involved amounted to $20,000, and he said that his overdrafts were more than balanced by money he had advanced to the company.

Tennent said that when the shoe company was in financial straits some time ago he had borrowed $20,000, which he advanced to the company. This loan now figures in the liabilities of the bankrupt concern.

W. D. Coles, referee in the bankruptcy proceedings against the Tennent Shoe Co., said Tuesday that Trustee Abbott obtained a subpena for Jack Tennent 10 days or two weeks ago. The subpena was turned over to the United States Marshal for service and a deputy went to the St. James Hotel seeking Mr. Tennent. The young man was not found there and the subpena was afterwards returned to Referee Coles marked, "Not found in St. Louis."

John H. Tennent Sr. afterwards told a friend that his son was not in St. Louis at the time, but in Texas, traveling for his firm, and that he did not arrive in St. Louis until Sunday night.

The funeral was held at 1:30 p. m. Tuesday from the Tennent home. The young wife arrived in an auto about 1 o'clock. The machine was stopped a block away and she walked to the residence accompanied by her brother-in-law. She was dressed in black and was heavily veiled.

The funeral exercises, conducted by Rev. Courtney Jones of the Webster Groves Episcopal Church, lasted only 20 minutes and the hearse, followed by three carriages, was then driven to the Bellefontaine Cemetery. Friends of the family sent several floral pieces.

Sent Another for Poison.

WACO, Tex., May 29.—Tennent spent three days here last week, leaving May 26 for St. Louis. To a few friends he confided that he was despondent and worried over suits pending in St. Louis involving the Tennent Shoe Co. He did not buy carbolic acid in person, but sent for it, claiming he wanted to use it on a corn on his foot. He bought few toilet articles at Old Corner drug store here and some one got the poison for him.

Roosevelt Threatens to "Ruin the Packers."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The President, according to the Chicago representatives who called at the White House last Saturday, said that if the beef packers opposed in any way the passage of the inspection provision, he, the President, would send a message to Congress that would ruin the packing business, not only in the United States, but throughout the world.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Representative Sulzer of New York today introduced a resolution calling on the President, "if not incompatible with the public interest," to send to the House at his earliest convenience the reports of Charles P. Neill and James B. Reynolds "in connection with their investigation of the meat "trust,' stockyards and the meat packing industry."

NEW YORK, May 29.—Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bloor, at the instance of Upton Sinclair, collected facts for the President's agents and planned their investigation at the Chicago packing houses.

Mr. and Mrs. Bloor live in Washington Crossing, Pa., a village about eight miles from Trenton, N. J. They went to Chicago just a week before the commissioners, lived with packing-house employes, obtained testimony and remained during the examination of the principal witnesses. Unborn calves, dead rats, human flesh and diseased meat are some Chicago dainties.

Mrs. Ella Reese Bloor is widely known as the result of her investigations into child labor conditions. Her husband is a detective. Mrs. Bloor got much valuable information from the women. The husband met the men employed in the packing houses in the saloons, where he sometimes posed as an applicant for work and sometimes as a workingman from another city, who had come to visit friends in Packingtown. He had money to spend, and made friends right and left.

"When the commission was named," Mrs. Bloor explained, while her husband approved her statements, "Mr. Sinclair asked us to go to Chicago to represent him. He had been asked to go himself by the President, who wished to see that the commissioners had every facility for obtaining the information they desired, but were unable to get away.

"Mr. Bloor and myself had read Mr. Sinclair's book and had talked Packington conditions over with him, so we were somewhat prepared for the revelations which awaited us. We had not, however, been able to grasp at second hand the awful significance of the evils into which we were to probe. As a matter of fact, no words are adequate to paint the horrors of the packing houses.

"What impressed us most is the terrible spirit which animates the workers. Their surroundings have envenomed them against the world. They are prisoners in a life that is one long torture, and are utterly callous to the ills which may arise from the distribution of diseased meat, rather glorying in its further defiling. They are all of them overworked and underpaid and each class of workers, as Mr. Sinclair outlines in his book, have their own special ailment.

"The surroundings necessarily brutalise the men and degrade the women," she continued. "There is immorality everywhere. It hampers a woman to have pretensions to virtue. Small wonder that they have no care to lessen the filth about them, which is to find its

"Do you know whether or not Mrs. Peugnet followed him after he left?"

"I don't know that she followed him."

The witness identified a letter written to her by Mrs. Peugnet from the Hotel Victory, Put-In-Bay, in August, 1905, in which she wrote:

"So I wrote 3096 today at the St. Louis Club about your transportation via the Clover Leaf, and I hope you got it. I told 3096 you would phone him, so you do."

"What does '3096' refer to?"

The witness named another prominent St. Louisan.

"What is 3096?"

"I think it was his telephone number."

"Did you attempt to get transportation in that way?"

"No, I did not."

The witness also identified a letter written to her by Mrs. Peugnet in the month. In one of them she wrote: "I have today the biggest fool letter from Punk. So much so that I am going to keep it to show you. He is a peach and I have more to tell you when we meet."

"Who is Punk?" she was asked.

"Mr. Peugnet," was the answer.

"Sonny played euchre this afternoon," was in another of the letters. The witnesses said "Sonny" was a swimming teacher out there. "That was her name for him," she said.

"She said that "Sonny" did not care very much for Mrs. Peugnet.

At the end of one letter was the postscript: "Just a wee wordlet to tell you now that I am still thinking of your own little self. Come back to Sonny." The witness identified the postscript writing as being in the swimming teacher's handwriting.

"Do you know of Mrs. Puegnet having gone to any place or office of men in this city other than the office of her husband?"

Went to Say "Hello."

"Do you know what she went there for?"

"She went there to say hello to a gentleman."

"How do you know that was all she went in there to do or say?"

"Because I was with her on one occasion."

"Simply she seemed to know them pretty well."

"Do you know of her going to other public offices in the city here?"

"Yes, sir. To an office in the Columbia Theater Building. She went into the man't office, but he was out. She seemed to know everything around there pretty well. She got a demijohn down and took a drink. I think it was whisky. She told me that she had gone there before at other times."

"Do you know anyone who went by the name of 'Buster Brown?'"

"He was from Columbus."

"How old was he?"

"I imagine he was about 21. Mrs. Peugnet named him 'Buster.' That was her name for him."

"Did she not tell you that she had been to Sandusky with a gentleman?"

"She was there with someone, but I don't remember who it was. She did not want Mr. Peugnet to know she was away. She left her valise down at the dock for that reason."

When cross-examined by Attorney Dyer for Mrs. Peugnet, Miss Albertson said she was 19 years old. She was asked: "During the time that you knew her did you see anything that made you think Mrs. Peugnet was not a lady in every way?"

"I would rather not answer that question," she answered. "I have never seen her do anything with my own eyes. Sometimes she did foolish things. She has told me lots of things, but I have never seen her do anything."

Miss Albertson testified that Mr. Peugnet had a birth opposite hers on the sleeper on the way to Put-in-Bay, and that she shared Mrs. Peugnet's room until she could get one next to Mrs. Mrs. Peugnet's at the hotel at Put-in-Bay.

Loud Talk in Hotel.

"Is it not a fact that the proprietor of the hotel asked Mr. Peugnet to leave on account of his actions with you?"

"No, not at all. It was Mrs. Peugnet's loud talking with her husband that caused him to make her move the next day to the Victory Hotel."

"Is it not a fact that the loud talk was caused by trouble between herself and her husband in regard to you?"

"No, sir."

The witness told of returning to St. Louis from Put-in-Bay with Capt. Peugnet, leaving at 3 o'clock in the morning, Mrs. Peugnet and Mr. Chouteau accompanying them to the boat.

"Did you ever make another trip with Capt. Peugnet?" she was asked.

"No, sir."

She said that she did accompany him to the Alps many times and that he sent flowers to her.

The witness said that Capt. Peugnet left the Veiled Prophet's ball at 11 o'clock.

"How many people were in the carriage on the way home?"

"There were six of us."

"It was pretty well filled, was it not?"

"Yes, indeed. I was sitting on the seat with Mrs. Jones, who sat between Mr. McHenry and myself."

"Was she sitting on the seat or on your lap?"

Letters Full of Gossip.

Five letters and a postcard are attached to the depositions. They were sent to Miss Albertson by Mrs. Peugnet from Put-in-Bay. In one Mrs. Peugnet wrote:

"You are wanted, not by me alone, but there are others. I am having Capt. Webster of the Priscilla add a line. He is of Commodore Worthington's yacht, 'the' one of all, and you are promised all good things. It only lasts a week, so hurry. You are in demand. I've told several of you, and their curiosity must be satisfied."

The line which Capt. Webster added was: "I know this is sudden, but this is life or death. Come.

"CHARLES."

Another letter reads:

"My Dear Kid: Yours to me and Sonny came, and we were happy to hear from you, but alas, no word as to when I might expect you to return. I wrote you of my letter to 3096. The electric crowd was great and last evening we had polo in the natatorium and your 'boy' did himself proud. He is a perfect water dog. You like dogs, eh? I am going to take a kodak of him in bathing suit, and you shall have one.

"I have today the biggest fool letter from Punk, so much so I am going to keep it to show you. He, haw. He is a peach. I have much to tell you about when we meet. Several miss you and ask for you, but none as much as your Sonny. Played euchre this afternoon. It poured cats and dogs all day. I'll dance for you tonight. Kiss me."

August 29, 1905, she wrote: "I will only send Al a line today. I am nearly dead with hay fever. I feel bum. As regards Kadish, I gave him your letter to read. Said he had written you. I believe I'd drop him, Kid, for I just heard a bunch of gossip, and you will never see him again, so what do you care? I'm told her and his girls and boys have knocked me. I wonder why. Absolutely no reason why they should. Your devoted Louise."

Miss Albertson Is 19.

Miss Albertson is a girl of 19, just out of Mary Institute. She explained her deposition when seen at her home, 5641 Clemens avenue, by a Post-Dispatch reporter. "Many times Mrs. Peugnet telephoned me," said Miss Albertson, "asking me to accompany them to the Alps. I went with them frequently. When she left to go to Put-In-Bay last June she begged me to go with her husband to the Alps any time he called up and asked me. She said he was an old man and that I should watch over him.

"Capt. Peugnet always took a fatherly interest in me. He is 69 years old, 50 years older than I. He had known me from childhood and watched me grow up. I dined with him and I drank something—what it was I do not know. I never drank anything to speak of, just some light after-dinner drink.

"Mrs. Peugnet went to Put-In-Bay in June. She wrote me many times to come there. Finally friends of mine on the South Side decided to go, and I said I would go with them. I called up Capt. Peugnet, and he happened to be going the same day, so we all went together."

Miss Albertson was until recently soprano soloist in the Lafayette Park Presbyterian Church. She is also a member of the Morning Choral Club.

L. C. Dyer, attorney for Mrs. Peugnet, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter: "We shall take depositions soon which will contradict the stories of the detectives and other persons whose depositions are filed. We'll show where their testimony comes from, how it was worked up and that there is nothing in it."

KERENS BLAMED BY REPUBLICANS

FIGHT IN COMMITTEE

Vote Stood 16 to 11 on Censuring Kerens Though No One Defended Him.

After a sharp fight in the Committee on Resolutions of the Republican City Convention, in session Tuesday at Harmonie Hall to elect delegates to the State and judicial conventions, the convention adopted resolutions vigorously denouncing Richard C. Kerens for his fight on Thomas K. Niedringhaus when candidate for Senator.

"Bolting is party treachery," the resolutions read in the position referring to Kerens. "This convention denounces the action of Richard C. Kerens in deserting the caucus nominee for the United States Senate before the last Legislature, whereby he was brought to dishonorable and disgraceful defeat."

he committee vote on this portion of the resolutions was 16 to 11. The minority, led by Judge Leo Rassieur, submitted a minority report that "while clear in the condemnation of party faithlessness, it was unwise to adopt a resolution publicly denouncing Richard C. Kerens. he minority moved that that part be stricken from the report.

Arguing in favor of this minority report, Juuge Rassieur said he would be the last to defend Kerens for his action, but that he considered it "useless to rub old sores."

Minority Report Tabled.

"There is no occasion to offend an old Republican," he urged. "there is no use to denounce in this way what has already been so strongly denounced on all sides."

Charles P. Graves moved that the minority report be tabeld, and his motion prevailed.

Another fight arose in the committee room over mention of the name of Jeptha D. Howe in a commendatory connection, and was won by the same vote—16 to 11. This portion of the resolutions praised the work of the City Campaign Committee in the last election and of Howe, its chairman. Those opposing it favored mention of the committee, but wanted Howe's name left out. The majority favored mentioning Howe.

The part indorsing the national administration and President Roosevelt was read amid silence. There was no applause.

State Republican officials were commended. Seven delegates were chosen after the resolutions were read, to select 193 delegates to the State and 113 to the judicial convention. All the delegates to both conventions are pledged to Niedringhaus. The committee of seven is: William Hilkenbaumer, Louis Spelbrink, A. P. Thomas, C. O. A. Brunk, Hupp Tevis, W. J. Taylor and Jeptha D. Howe.

Two Contested Wards.

Chairman Howe introduced George Williams as temporary presiding officer. Fred H. Smith was made secretary pro tem., and H. L. Weeke temporary sergeant-at-arms.

There are 192 delegates, who were chosen at the primaries held in all wards Monday. These will name the 192 delegates to attend the State nominating convention at Excelsior Springs Thursday and the 113 delegates to the judicial convention at Jefferson City July 25. It is expected that the delegates will elect themselves to attend the Stae convention.

In the two contested wards in the primaries Monday the Howe and anti-Howe factions made an even break. In the Thirteenth Ward William H. Ludwig, the anti-Howe candidate, secured the election of his delegations over that of Edward H. Lemcke by a vote of 567 to 310, in spite of the activity of "Tub" Becker and other visiting Howe men. Ludwig was recently deposed as member of the Republican City Central Committee from the ward, and Lemcke was chosen to the place.

In the Twenty-seventh Ward, where Chairman Howe lives, the Howe delegation won over that of Walter W. Birge, the vote standing 524 to 329. Here also many ward leaders aided Howe. There were no contests in the other wards and the delegates elected are supporters of the Howe committee.

"A ROCK IN THE BALTIC."

Robert Barr's New Novel—Undoubtedly His Finest Work.

Robert Barr is one of the few twentieth century novelists of the higher order. He has a way of making his characters do things and then keep on doing them, with no intermission for scenic or psychic details.

Never has Mr. Barr so thoroughly illustrated this admirable quality as in his new novel, "A Rock in the Baltic." This cleverly constructed romance of action starts off with a rush in the first chapter (where too many authors content themselves with merely setting their stage), and, without rest or falter, continues to maintain the high-speed pressure to the very end. Moreover, the interest pyramids to a climax utterly original and amazing.

In fact, the element of amazement is strong throughout. Just when the reader thinks he has a line on the whole sequence, some perfectly logical, yet equally unexpected, surprise flashes into view to upset all caiculations. Brilliant, indeed, must be the veteran novel reader who can foresee in any one chapter what will occur in the next.

"A Rock in the Baltic" tells of the loves and adventures of a charming American girl and a plucky British naval officer. It is as different from the stereotyped story of love and adventure as "The Three Guardsmen" differs from a machine-made dime novel.

There is not a dull or even a mediocre line in "A Rock in the Baltic." It is a treat to vary the routine of ordinary fiction by reading such a book.

Notwithstanding that this book has been made in style and quality equal to the usual $1.50 editions, it will be placed with the reading public under a unique system. One leading merchant in each city, The May Co. in St. Louis, will have a special edition, and it can only be had at this store.

GREELEY BADLY HURT IN FIGHT

WARRANT OUT FOR HIM

His Accuser Also Suffering From Gashes of Knife on Face.

Former Detective George Greeley is in a critical condition at his home, 2939A Easton avenue, from a compound fracture of the skull, and his wife fears he is dying. She said Tuesday to a Post-Dispatch reporter that her husband had told her he got his injuries in an encounted with Shep White of 1814 Cass avenue. Greeley is unconscious and no one is allowed in his room except a trained nurse.

A warrant was sworn out against Greeley, at White's instigation, charging assault. White was cut in the forehead and neck in the affray, which White's parents say occurred in the presence of Miss Mamie Winters of 1847 Cass avenue at 2 a. m. last Thursday.

An effort to see White Tuesday was unsuccessful. His parents said that he was confined to his bed and that any excitement or exertion caused violent headaches. Peter White, his father, said:

"Shep was at one time very attentive to Miss Winters, but more than a year ago he stopped going with her so frequently. There was no quarrel between them, so far as I know, and Shep always spoke to her after that when he met her on the street.

"When Shep came home Thursday morning after the fight with Greeley he told me he had met Greeley and Miss Winters and had spoken to Miss Winters, merely lifting his hat. He said Greeley wanted to know why he spoke to the young lady, and that he replied that he was well acquainted with her.

Wife Kept From Greeley.

"Greeley did not seem to like that, Shep said, and struck at him. Shep said he dodged the blow and struck back. In a moment, he said, Greeley drew the knife and cut him, slashing it across the left side of his neck, clear around his chin, and cutting him over the eye, too. Shep did not tell me whether he hit Greeley."

Dr. Philip J. Heuer of 537 North Grand avenue is treating Greeley and refuses to allow even his wife to see the injured man. Detectives sent out from the Circuit Attorney's office Monday to serve the warrant on Greeley were not permitted to see him and Dr. Heuer issued a certificate that he was dying of the fracture in his skull.

Greeley was formerly on Chief Desmond's staff, but was reduced three years ago to special officer. He made several captures, among them being several icebox thieves, and was promoted to Central District.

During the World's Fair Greeley was suspended for intoxication. He was accused afterward of an assault on Don Killian, brother of former Detective Lee Killian, in company with two other men.

Miss Winters, who witnessed the affray between Greeley and White, is 21 years old and pretty. She has auburn hair and brown eyes. White and a man she knows only as "Dempsey," she says, repeatedly kicked Greeley in the head after White had knocked him down.

Woman Says Greeley Was Kicked.

"I was returning from Delmar Garden with my younger sister," Miss Winters said, "and got off an Eighteenth street car at Nineteenth street and Cass avenue. I heard someone call my name and turned. Greeley was on the corner.

"I talked to him probably 10 minutes and my sister went on home. As we stood there White and Dempsey came down the street. White said to me, 'I'm your friend, ain't I?' I said I supposed so. Then he asked Greeley the same question and Greeley said he didn't know. Then he asked Dempsey, and Dempsey said 'yes.'

"White said he was a great scrapper and could whip Greeley. As Greeley turned away White started toward him. White struck him and knocked him down. I didn't see Greeley use a knife. As he started to get up White knocked him down again, and then both men kicked him—at least half a dozen times. I ran."

BRUTALITY ENDS LIFE OF CHILD

visible agitation of his son's terrible death.

"I have known Hertel a long time," he said, "and I thought he and his wife would be good persons to take care of my boys. So far as I knew the children were happy. I was to go down and see them Sunday, but Saturday Mrs. Hertel telephoned me it would not be convenient to have me then, and asked me to postpone the visit a week.

"I asked how the children were getting along and was told they were all right.

Said He Fell From Swing.

"At about midnight Saturday Mrs. Hertel brought Johnnie to the house where I board. She said the scars on him were caused by falling out of a swing against a barbed-wire fence. It happened, she said, Wednesday. The child was sick, but I did not understand just what was the matter with him. We tried to get a doctor to the house, but we couldn't, so Mrs. Hertel telephoned to the police at the Soulard Street Station and they took him to the hospital. I saw him there Monday afternoon. I wasn't with him when he died."

Mrs. Rathmann is being sought by the police. She called Saturday night on Mrs. Frances Metzer of 1408 South Eleventh street and there became involved in a quarrel with Tony Hartoebben of 3415 Indiana avenue. She caused the young man's arrest on a charge of striking her, and then disappeared. Hartoebben brought cross charges, and the police were unable to find Mrs. Rathmann to answer them or to prosecute the young man.

Mr. Hertel's Explanation.

He denied that the children had been cruelly treated.

"The children, John, 4 years old, and Eddie, 6, were placed in the care of my wife and myself seven weeks ago," said Hertel. "My wige afreed to board them for $2.

"Johnnie, the younger boy, was playing in a swing in the doorway one day when he fell out and scratched his leg on a barbed-wire fence near the door. He lay there in pain and was found by his brother. I applied liniment to the wounds. We tried to reduce the swelling. The child also complained of burned feet. He had been going barefooted, and climbing around on cinder piles had burned his feet a little. The wounds seemed to be healing, when the child began scratching the sores. The swelling was worse than ever.

"We took the baby to Dr. Julian, in Carondelet, and he told us the child could not live more than three days. He advised us to take it to a hospital. We then took the boy to the home of its father. He was not at home. We then went to the Soulard Street Police Station with the child. While we were there Mrs. Rathmann came into the station to complain about some man who had beaten her. Here eyes were blacked.

"She paid no attention to the little one—just said, 'how's the baby getting along?' and walked out.

"We took the child to the City Hospital, arriving there at 3 o'clock Sunday morning. It died Monday."

Dr. H. M. Julian of 7800 Virginia avenue said that Mr. and Mrs. Hertel brought the Rathmann boy to him Saturday night about 10:30 o'clock. He diagnosed the case as acute phymosis and told them that an immediate operation was necessary. He was told that the Hertels did not have the money, so he advised them that they should take the child to the Ctly Hospital. He did not have time to make a complete diagnosis of the case. The physician remarked that the trip to the hospital was a matter of life and death.

CRIPPLED MAN RAN.

V. L. Williams, who was arrested Monday by Policeman Healy in East St. Louis on suspicion of being a house-prowler, was held under $300 bond for the grand jury, Tuesday morning by Justice Brady, on a charge of burglary and larceny, on the complaint of Dr. H. B. Beedle.

When he was arrested, Williams was walking on crutches and claimed to be a cripple. As Policeman Healy was telephoning for the patrol wagon he left Williams standing some distance away. He was surprised to see Williams suddenly drop his crutches and run out of the door. After a chase of a block, the officer overtook him and brought him back.

When searched at the police station several keys and a corner of a picture were found in his pockets. These were later identified by Dr. Beedle as property stolen from his office in the Beckwith Building several nights ago. Dr. Beedle also identified the trousers Williams was wearing as his.

After the property was identified, Williams admitted that he had entered the doctor's office last week and stolen the goods. A revolver was also found in Williams' possession, and he was fined $100 and costs for carrying a concealed weapon.

Mr. Rich was among the patients Mrs. Merriman had under her care and a love affair soon sprung up between them.

DAUGHTER LEAVES MILLIONAIRE'S HOME AND WON'T RETURN

Miss Portia Keefer, Pittsburg Coal Magnate's Child, Runs Away When Failure in School Classes Faces Her—Located by Parents, She Says She Wants to Work.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 29.—Fearing she was not going to pass to a higher grade, angered at remarks of her teachers and rebellious because her father refused to permit her to quit school, Miss Portia Keefer, the 16-year-old daughter of W. W. Keefer, a millionaire official of the Pittsburg Coal Co., stole away from her father's home last Friday night during his absence. All the luggage she took with her was in a handbag, and with her went a violin, valued at $1000, the gift of her father a couple of weeks ago.

Mr. Keefer was away from home when his daughter left, but as soon as he learned that she was gone he applied to the police to detain the girl if she was seen. Mr. Keefer ordered that no expense be spared to locate his daughter.

Today the father announced that he had located her; that she has undertaken to work for her own living and has refused to return home. He announces that he will spend a thousand dollars a week if necessary to look after her and see that no harm comes to her, but he will let her wrestle with the problem of life awhile on her own account. He refuses to say where she had been located, but said that she was well and would be looked after.

The disappearance of the girl has created the greatest excitement in the fashionable East End section, where the Keefers reside. Miss Keefer is an only child and everything that wealth could secure was given her. She is tall and remarkably beautiful. She is a violinist of rare ability—the best amateur in Western Pennsylvania, musicians say, and was a second-year pupil at the Bedford High School. Several weeks ago her father presented her with the $1000 violin. It is understood she intends turning her musical talent to use in the effort to earn her own living.

When the girl disappeared on last Friday, Mr. Keefer was almost beside himself with fear that she had been kidnaped. As an official of the Pittsburg Coal Co. he has many enemies among the mine workers and the story gained currency that his child had been stolen for ransom. Mr. Keefer at once notified Chief of Police McQuade of Pittsburg that his daughter was missing, and through the Pittsburg police notification was sent in many different directions to look out for her. Mr. Keefer called up Chicago by telephone and personally instructed the police to take his daughter in charge the moment she reached there—if she went to Chicago. The family came from Chicago to Pittsburg some years ago and Mr. Keefer thought his daughter might return there, but it appears that she did not. Mr. Keefer said this morning:

"I am much relieved at having located her daughter, who left our home last Friday. She had some trouble with her teacher in the High School and I did not side with her, so she left home hurriedly. For some time I was at a loss to know where she went, but she has at last been located. She has decided to work to support herself, so she sends me word. I do not think it is any of the public's business, though I thank my friends for the assistance given in the search."

"What about the stories that your daughter was either kidnaped or eloped?"

W. W. Keefer, who is credited with having $1,000,000, was formerly an Illinois coal operator with offices in Chicago and was taken in with the Pittsburg Coal Co. about three years since. He is known here as superintendent of mines of the Pennsylvania Coal Co., having an immense block of stock and a large salary. His home at 5424 Stanton avenue is one of the finest in the city.

One of the teachers at the Bedford avenue High School who is said to have been instrumental in driving Miss Keefer from the school is prostrated, but Prof. W. D. McFarland is defiant and says he will take all the responsibility. He says the girl fell behind in her studies and that she was told she must make up lost time or be set down, and that she then left the school in a rage.

GATES GETS A PORT OF ENTRY

"Bet a Million" Wins Congressional Fight for Port Arthur, Tex.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—"Bet a million" John W. Gates has won a Texas port of entry from the United States Government. The Committee on Ways and Means has decided to make Port Arthur, Tex., a port of entry in accordance with the recommendations of Mr. Gates.

When the proposition was up several weeks ago Mr. Gates staggered the members of the committee, on behalf of the Kansas City Southern Railroad, to construct a tidewater canal at a cost of $1,300,000 at Port Arthur and give it to the Government if Port Arthur should be selected as the port of entry against Sabine Pass.

The bill authorizes the Secretary of War to secure title to the property and to acquire from the State of Texas control of the waters of the port. Mr. Gates will now have an opportunity to make good.

SNYDER TRIAL SEPT. 18.

The bribery case of Robert M. Snyder, Kansas City millionaire promoter, was called before Judge Reynolds Tuesday, and was set for trial Sept. 18. Circuit Attorney Sager, who caused a new information to be issued a few days ago against Snyder, hopes to bring Fred G. Uthoff, former Councilman, here from Denver to testify.

Snyder is charged with paying Uthoff $50,000 for his vote on the Central Traction bill in 1898. It was in his first trial that Judge Henry S. Priest declared to the jury that "Bribery is only a conventional crime." The jury gave Snyder five years. The Supreme Court later reversed the verdict.

New Trial Denied Mispagel.

Anton F. Mispagel, former cashier of the St. Charles Savings Bank, was found guilty of embezzlement March 2 and sentenced to serve two years in the Penitentiary, was denied a new trial by Judge Barnett in St. Charles Tuesday. T. B. Harvey, his attorney, gave notice of an appeal to the Supreme Court. Mispagel is out on $12,000 bond.

QUEEN OF BOY THIEVES' BAND NOW INFORMER

Pretty May Pendleton, Who Had Stolen Goods, Freed by Police.

ONE BOY IS ARRESTED

He Tells of Two Burglaries of Grocery Stores to Get Food.

THEFTS FOR FOUR YEARS

Boys in Band Stole Singly or in "Teams," Girl Says.

Pretty May Pendleton, 18-year-old queen of a band of boy thieves suspected of many thefts in the West End, was released from the holdover at the Four Courts Tuesday, it being the intention of the police to use her as a witness against the members of the band, one of whom, Emmett Everson, is under arrest.

According to the girl's story, the boys, none of whom is more than 18 years old, have been stealing for four years, singly and in "teams," and she has shared the profits of their thefts. Although much property, which she admits is stolen, was found at her home, she denies that she took active part in the operations of the band.

May and her 3-year-old daughter live now with her mother at 6305 Suburban avenue. The girl is tall, with blue eyes and light brown hair. She is slow of speech, sullen in manner. Emmett is 5 feet tall, active and alert, with small, quick black eyes and a ready wit. He seems proud of his achievements.

For a month he and May lived at 6127 Suburban avenue in a furnished room, known as May and Clem Henson. They represented themselves as brother and sister and were finally ejected for failure to pay rent. They admit they obtained much of their food by stealing from groceries and meat markets.

Stole Food to Eat.

"May and I did two burglaries alone," Emmett told Chief Desmond Tuesday. "She 'jiggered' (stood guard outside) while I did the jobs. The first place we robbed was a grocery at Newstead and Evans avenues, a month ago. We needed groceries, and that's the way we got them. I broke a pane of glass with a stone and opened a window. She stood outside while I got all the stuff we needed. I filled two baskets, and each of us carried one home.

"The other job we did was in a store on Hodiamont avenue. We turned the trick just the same way as the first one.

"Before I knew May she went with another band. They did lots more burglaries than I did."

The police believe that Emmett was connected with the original band.

Emmett and George Palfrey, who is his age, were arrested last fall for robbing Whitcomb's drug store at Washington and Garrison avenues. Emmett was not then 18 years old and he was sentenced to two years in Jail. He was paroled after he had served three months and 20 days of the sentence. Detective Shannon, who made the arrests, said at that time that Emmett was one of a band of boys frequently seen near Ewing and Garrison avenues.

May Pendleton told Capt. McNamee and Sergt. McCormack of the Mounted District what Everson and the other boys in his band had done, but denied committing any burglaries herself.

"I knew he was committing burglaries to get the stuff he brought home," she told the police. "He broke into butcher shops and brought home sausage, steaks and meat and lot of things to eat. He'd get clothing, too, sometimes. I knew he was stealing it."

THIS YOUNG WOMAN WAS QUEEN OF BOYS' BAND OF THIEVES

WHAT WOULD YOU DO IF——?

Some Posing Questions That Face Young Ethel Rawdon.

What would you do if you were a wealthy and beautiful New York girl and had dozens of offers of marriage and felt impelled to refuse them all, just because you could not get rid of the memory of one mysterious man's face?

Wouldn't it make the situation all the harder if you had seen him but once, had never spoken with him, did not even know his name, address, profession or nationality, or even if he were married or single, or whether or not you would ever again see him?

That's the poser that faced Ethel Rawdon.

Here's another queer question: If you were a poor exile from home, and, all of a sudden, discovered a big-paying silver mine that lifted you out of the slough of poverty into the highlands of wealth, what would be the very first thing you would do?

Whatever it would be, it is a safe bet that it would not be the same thing that Tyrrel Rawdon did.

Once more: Suppose your pastor were a High Church Episcopal clergyman who regarded divorce as one of the Seven Deadly Sins, and he were married to a fluffy butterfly of a society girl who hated church work, and she didn't happen to hate a certain other man, and she left her husband and demanded a divorce.

What would you advise that poor young rector to do?

You might guess a year before hitting on the particular course that the Rev. Basil Stanhope elected to pursue under those same trying circumstances.

All these odd questions naturally give rise to the triple query: Who were Ethel Rawdon, Tyrrel Rawdon and Basil Stanhope?

The question is natural today. But three months hence the person who asks it will be looked on as an ignoramus or a backwoodsman.

For they are living, breathing characters in a book that is going to be read and reread as a text in the pulpit until every name in it will be as familiar as the name of the street you live on.

The book is "The Man Between." It is Amelia E. Barr's very newest and very best novel. Into it she has put enough cleverness and life and sustained interest to fill a half-dozen ordinary books.

"The Man Between" will be published serially in the Sunday Post-Dispatch in four weekly installments. The first will appear on Sunday, June 3, and the concluding installment on Sunday, June 24. Each installment will be handsomely illustrated and printed on fine paper in handy form for preservation.

"The Man Between" is the ecnd novel of the great $150,000 series. The series comprises 12 wholly new novels by the 12 foremost living writers of fiction.

By a feat of journalistic enterprise never before paralleled the Sunday Post-Dispatch has secured the exclusive right to publish each of these 12 splendid novels serially, prior to its publication in book form.

Order early to avoid disappointment; or, better still, subscribe for a year and get the entire set of 12 volumes free of charge.

CAMEL ON RAMPAGE LOOKED LIKE GHOST

Ab Dallah, aged 40, a one-hump camel, was the whole show at the Alton street fair in Sportsman's Park Monday evening, which was opening night.

Jealousy of the one elephant in the show and the remembrance that Monday was the anniversary of his desert birth are given as causes for the hilarity which Ab Dallah manifested.

His part of the show is to act as a miniature caravan and bear passengers across the pen in which he is confined.

Altonians, like all hill dwellers, like the sport of the plains so well that Ab Dallah was forced into doing several times his duty Monday evening. He rebelled before he had taken Mrs. Maurice Hanlon once around the ring and started on a rampage. Mrs. Hanlon was thrown from her seat, but was prevented from falling by men who caught her.

Ab Dallah broke through ropes and other barriers and ran through side shows as if they were of no consequence. His long service has made him as bare as a Mexican dog, and some thought that a camel's ghost was coming among them.

He silenced the barkers and stopped all performances.

No program was continued until Ab Dallah was captured and taken back to his pen by his keeper. He was soon subdued into resuming his work as a beast of burden.

The elephant of whom he is suspected of being jealous became the center of attraction Monday afternoon when he drank up all the water in a big watering trough and refused to permit the horses to come within sniffing distance.

Ad Men's Luncheon.

The St. Louis Advertising Men's League gave its weekly luncheon at the Missouri Athletic Club Tuesday. W. S. Hannah of the National Live Stock Reporter, East St. Louis, was among the speakers.

She Quit Coffee

But it was a hard pull.

It is hard to belive that coffee will put a person in such a condition as it did a woman of Apple Creek, O. She tells her own story:

"I did not believe coffee caused my trouble, and frequently said I liked it so well I would not quit drinking it, even if it took my life, but I was a miserable sufferer from heart trouble and nervous prostration for four years.

"I was scarcely able to be around at all. Had no energy and did not care for anything. Was emaciated and had a constant pain around my heart until I thought I could not endure it. For months I never went to bed expecting to get up in the morning. I felt as though I was liable to die any time during the night.

"Frequently I had nervous chills and the least excitement would drive sleep away, and any little noise would upset me terribly. I was gradually getting worse until finally one day it came over me and I asked myself what is the use of being sick all the time and buying medicine so that I could indulge myself in coffee?

"So I thought I would see if I could quit drinking coffee, and got some Postum Food Coffee to help me quit. I made it strictly according to directions and I want to tell you that change was the greatest step in my life. It was easy to quit coffee because I had the Postum, which I like better than I liked the old coffee. One by one the old troubles left, until now I am in splendid health, nerves steady, heart all right and the pain all gone. Never have any more nervous chills, don't take any medicine, can do all my housework and have done a great deal beside.

"My sister-in-law, who visited me this summer, had been an invalid for some time, much as I was. I got her to quit coffee and drink Postum. She gained five pounds in three weeks, and I never saw such a change in anyone's health."

"There's a reason."

MILLION CLUB IN STORMY SESSION

Mr. Reardon Causes Rapid Discussion, but Finally Brings Peace.

COMMITTEES ARE NAMED

Publicity and Auditing Bodies to Be Satisfactory to the Kastors.

Rapid fire oratory marked the regular meeting of the Million Club held at the Mercantile Club Monday evening. The point of the discussion was the appointment of the publicity and auditing committees, and was brought about by the report of Ernst Kastor, representative of an advertising company.

The Million Club has recently let an advertising contract to the Kastors for the advertising of St. Louis for four years at $100,000 a year. Mr. Kastor reported that he was handicapped in his work by the want of a publicity and auditing committee. The former is desired for purposes of conference and the latter for examining of accounts and making of reports to the club.

James A. Reardon declared, in substance, that the President of the club, L. D. Kingsland, had already exceeded his authority and appointed a publicity committee. President Kingsland denied this and Mr. Kastor supported him in his denial.

President Kingsland said that he had gone no further than suggesting the name of a man whom he thought would give good service on the committee.

Mr. Reardon said that he thought the Executive Committee could well do the work of the Publicity and Auditing committees. The fact of the delay occasioned by monthly meetings was used as an argument against that.

All Members of Club.

President Kingsland said: "Inasmuch as the men who will serve on these committees will be members of the Million Club, there can be no doubt as to their trustworthiness."

Mr. Reardon's remarks called forth the request for an explanation, but he shrugged his shoulder in reply to the president and others.

Mr. Kastor replied to Mr. Reardon: "There's one thing the matter with you. You want the lime light for yourself."

President Kingsland said: "In the dark days of this club, when few believed in its possibilities, the president was an unquestioned person. He was encouraged to do that which he thought best and everybody assured him that he was a man with a bear by the tail, and that he could expect the bear to swallow him at any moment.

"Now that the darkness has been passed through, there are many to criticise and to question that which is unquestionable."

Speeches were made in favor of the administration by Ben Westhus and L. C. Irvine and a number of others.

Peace came when Mr. Reardon made a motion to have the Executive Committee, with the chairman, appoint a Publicity and Auditing Committee satisfactory to the Kastors.

This being the very motion his opponents desired, it was carried without objection.

A prize of $100 was awarded to Mrs. Louisa Gerritzen, 2522 Dodier street, for the motto, "To the Front," and one of $50 to Mrs. Alice Stockbarger, 6703 Alabama avenue, whose design was accepted by the club.

SAVES HERSELF, BUT HOME BURNS

Webster Groves Woman's Dress Caught Fire From Light She Carried.

Aided only by her 10-year-old son, Kenneth, Mrs. Carrswell of Spring avenue, Webster Groves, extinguished flames which were burning her clothing and then made a vain attempt to save her home.

Her dress took fire from the light she was carrying while she searched for winter clothing in the attic at 10 p. m. Monday. The child helped her to subdue the flames with blankets and then they tried to carry water to put out the fire which was burning the house.

Mrs. E. S. Hart, wife of Mayor Hart, owner of the Carrswell house and next door neighbor, saw the flames and became so frightened that she fainted.

A physician and the fire department were called at the same time and the faint proved providential for the Captain of the Fire Department, W. Claude Long.

While he was directing his men from the top of the house the roof caved in and he was thrown to the next floor.

Among his injuries was a jagged hole in his arm just above the wrist, and so close to the artery that immediate attention was necessary to keep it from being fatal. The presence of the physician, Dr. Armstrong, made it possible for him to be cared for at once.

Despite the work of the firemen the house was burned. Its value was $4000, which is covered by insurance.

Bronze Tablet to Clark.

William Clark, lived in St. Louis until his death in 1838, after his return from the Northwest, will be marked by a bronze memorial tablet, to be placed in the northwest corner of the National Bank of Commerce Building, Broadway and Olive street, the site of Gov. Clark's home. The Committee on Historic Spots of the Civic League and the Missouri Historical Society will assist at the unveiling of the tablet, which is set for Sept. 23 next.

NO GATE OR GUARD AT GRADE CROSSING

Companion of Man Killed by Train Charges Lack of Care.

Hugh Gunn, who was thown from his wagon when his friend, Thomas B. Nolan, was killed by a Burlington switch engine in the wreck of the vehicle in which they were riding towards the river on Bremen avenue, declares there was neither gate nor watchman at the grade crossing.

Gunn, who lives at 3523A St. Louis avenue, is driver for a grocery store, for which Nolan was clerk. They were driving down Bremen avenue Monday at 6:20 p. m. with a load of goods for a boat on the river.

As they crossed the Burlington tracks, the wagon was struck by a switch engine, which came round a curve at great speed. Nolan was thrown 15 feet, his neck broken and his skull fractured. Gunn, though hurled some distance, was uninjured. The horse had to be shot. The wagon and contents were demolished.

At the point where the accident occurred, an elevator in the hollow of the curve prevents the train crew from seeing the crossing until very close to it. A watchman is said to be stationed at the crossing until 6 p. m. each day.

Nolan lived with his wife at 4661 Evans avenue. He was 32 years old.

Girl Took Poison After Letter Came From Clerk.

Gertrude Smith of 2824 Pine street, under treatment at the City Hospital for carbolic acid poisoning, said Tuesday to a Post-Dispatch reporter that she took the drug after brooding over a note written to her by a clerk at the Four Courts. What the contents of the letter were she refused to say. It contained a key to her room.

Miss Smith is 22 years old and handsome. She has brown eyes, luxuriant brown hair and a good figure. Physicians at the hospital entertain hope for her recovery.

The acid was drunk Monday evening at the Pine street address. Miss Smith bought a two-ounce bottle. As she entered the house, returning, she met Nellie Donnelly, daughter of the woman who owns the house, and told her she intended to end her life. Miss Donnelly thought she was joking. Miss Smith went into her room and Miss Donnelly followed. She saw Miss Smith raise the bottle to her lips and sprang forward in time to knock it from her hands before a great quantity was taken.

The letter was received Saturday. Miss Smith wrote an answer Sunday morning, but did not post it, and destroyed it that night. She went to spend the day with her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, 4126 Gano avenue.

Mrs. Smith commented on the fact that the girl hummed a song Sunday, of which the refrain was, "She had the blues, but she didn't have the heart to cry." She said her daughter had moved to the Pine street address to be nearer her work.

AMERICANS IN REBEL ARMIES IN GUATEMALA

FOUR INVADING FORCES

SALVADOR DECLARES WAR

Nicaragua Also Takes a Hand by Sending Warship to Rebels.

MEXICO CITY, May 29.—Dissatisfaction of foreign planters, including many Americans, with the oppressive regime of President Estrada Cabrera of Guatemala is responsible for a revolution which opened yesterday with an attack on the city of Ocos by the revolutionists after Guatemala was invaded by four rebel armies.

The rebels who attacked Ocos have been driven back across the Mexican borders, but small parties of Revolutionists are appearing at various other points along the Mexican boundary and threatening the Guatemalan Government.

Gen. Jose Castillo, Cabrera's rival for the presidency seven years ago, headed the army which attacked Ocos. His fighters consist of about five hundred desperate characters, recruited in San Francisco, Cal., some tige ago. They are armed with modern rifles and have a big supply of ammunition. Castillo has many scores to settle with Cabrera. Among other things, Castillo says he was "counted out" at the presidential election which sent Cabrera into office.

The respective le[illegible]ers of the three other rebel armies are Gen. Manuel Leandro Barillas, formerly President of Guatemala; Gen. Pineda, a veteran fighter, and Gen. Toledo, former Minister of War in Guatemala.

In addition to the San Franciscans in Castillo's army, Americans generally are rallying to the rebel banner. Nicaragua is doing her share by sending a warship from New Orleans to Puerto Barrios, the sea terminus of Guatemala, to intercept the President if he attempts to flee.

Invaded by Four Armies.

Gen. Manuel Leandro Barillas, formerly President of Guatemala, with 200 cavalry and a stock of 100 rifles, crossed the Mexican border at a point near Motozinla, and is aiming at Quetzatlange, a large town garrisoned by Guatemalan regulars. Barillas has great coffee estates in that neighborhood, where is very popular and whence he was driven four years ago by President Cabrera. It is believed that Quetzatlange will be taken without much bloodshed. Barillas will recruit new men on his march across the mountains, the people being loyal to him.

Gen Jose Leon Castilla captured Ocos without much resistance. He took that point with 500 men and was received with enthusiasm by the people. Ocos is the most important point for revolutionists, as it gives them a base on the sea.

Gen. Pineda, with a large force of good fighters, crossed into Guatemala Sunday from British Honduras and invaded the province of Pelen. He expects to rally the Indians in Pelen.

Salvador Declares War.

Simultaneously Gen. Toledo, formerly Minister of War in Gautemala, crossed into Gautemala with 200 troops, including the Salvadorean regulars and disaffected Guatemalans, largely refugees from the tyranny of Cabrera. This important body of troops is well drilled and armed with modern weapons. This act practically declares war by Salvador against Guatemala.

The revolutionists are recruiting along the way of their respective lines of march, and all foreign planters in Guatemala are digusted with the oppressive regime of Cabrera and the onerous taxation, and are rallying to the support of the revolution. German planters offered a drilled body of men. Americans and British are similarly disaffected.

The purpose of the revolution is understood to be to Americanize the country. Guatemala is reported honeycombed with sedition, so high runs popular sentiment against President Cabrera, who for a long time has had to make his public appearance with an armed guard to protect his person.

Gen. Barrillas and Gen. Castillo, on crossing the line Sunday night, distributed a proclamation to the inhabitants of Guatemala.

Among other things, the proclamation recites that the standard of revolt has been raised [illegible] the two extremes of the Republic against Cabrera, "the most calum[illegible]tous figure of our contemporaneous [illegible] history, who, having possessed himself of power by crime, has perpetuated himself therein by a chain of crimes."

The proclamation continues:

We desire, with the e[illegible] country, radical reform of the Constitut[illegible] of 1879, in order that it may fulfill the a[illegible] tions of true Liberals who are such by pr[illegible]ple and conviction, not of usurpers who do[illegible] plutocratic capital for incre[illegible] and who, [illegible]t themselves the champions of law and [illegible]r, pass their lives in open enmity with al[illegible]erty and all law.

We desire that reform[illegible] guarantees that the individual may no[illegible]r be at the mercy of the first despot who [illegible] a mind to trample on them; that criminal [illegible]ctionaries shall be made to answer for the[illegible] misdeeds; that there may be no more savage [illegible]ure, arbitrary imprisonment nor execu[illegible] without trial in Guatemala; that justi[illegible]y be done to him who is elected them to [illegible]e desire a legislature freely elected by [illegible] people. We desire a change in the blun[illegible] foreign policy of President Cabrera.

The desire to cultiv[illegible] with our sister republics cordial and fr[illegible] fraternal relations, instead of provoking [illegible] regard of others' rights, continual pretens[illegible] claims on the part of foreign powers. [illegible] own Government should prove, by the [illegible] fitness of its acts and not by pettifoger[illegible] interfuges, that the foreigner can live in [illegible] midst in the same way as in any other [illegible] country and that we do not deserve [illegible] owed in the matter of international [illegible] with the Barbary States.

We desire purity, [illegible] economy in the administrative expend[illegible] through the settlement of our internal [illegible] ternal debts.

We desire silver a[illegible] basis of currency and the abolition of [illegible] present disgraceful paper-money regime.

Compatriots, I ur[illegible] to join me and rally round the banne[illegible] national regeneration. Our mind is made [illegible] we will die and achieve the regener[illegible] of our country or meet a glorious de[illegible]

FLAYS UNDRAPED YOUTHS

Girl's Escort Praised for Using a Horsewhip.

In dismissing Oscar Benson, 22 years old, on a charge of assault and battery in the Court of Criminal Correction, Judge Moore said that the defendant, who was accused of beating Joe Arnsmeyer of 3424 Watson road with a buggy whip, might have been excused for using a club instead of a whip.

Benson did not deny beating the boy and two other youths with the whip. He said that as he was driving past a pond near Manchester avenue May 15 with the young woman to whom he is engaged to be married the youths, who were bathing, came out and stood on the bank. He says they refused to go back into the water, and that he turned the lines over to the young woman and applied the buggy whip to their undraped and smarting figures.

CHILD'S AWFUL SKIN HUMOR

Screamed with Pain—Suffering Nearly Broke Parent's Heart—Twelve Years of Misery—Doctor Called Case Incurable—Helped from First, and

SPEEDILY CURED BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I wish to inform you that your wonderful Cuticura has put a stop to twelve years of misery I passed with my son. As an infant I noticed on his body a red spot and treated same with different remedies for about five years, but when the spot began to get larger I put him under the care of doctors. Under their treatment the disease spread to four different parts of his body. The longer the doctors treated him the worse it grew. During the day it would get rough and form like scales. At night it would be cracked, inflamed, and badly swollen, with terrible burning and itching. When I think of his suffering, it nearly breaks my heart. His screams could be heard down stairs. The suffering of my son made me full of misery. I had no ambition to work, to eat, nor could I sleep.

"One doctor told me that my son's eczema was incurable and gave it up for a bad job. One evening I saw an article in the paper about the wonderful Cuticura and decided to give it a trial.

"I tell you that Cuticura Ointment is worth its weight in gold; and when I had used the first box of Ointment there was a great improvement, and by the time I had used the second set of Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent my child was cured. He is now twelve years old, and his skin is as fine and smooth as silk. (signed) Michael Steinman, 7 Sumner Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., April 16, 1905."

Complete External and Internal Treatment for every Humor, from Pimples to Scrofula, from Infancy to Age, consisting of Cuticura Soap, 25c., Ointment, 50c., Resolvent, 50c. (In form of Chocolate Coated Pills, 25c. per vial of 60), may be had of all druggists. A single set often cures. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston.

MOTHER DIES OF GRIEF.

The funeral of Mrs. M. J. Miller, who died of a complication of diseases at her home, 3353A Magnolia avenue, will be held Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 from the home to St. Paul's Cemetery. Services will be conducted at the residence.

Added to her illness has been grief for her daughter, who died Sept. 20, 1905.

Mrs. Miller was born in Missouri 63 years ago. She is survived by three daughters, Miss Mary Miller of San Francisco, Mrs. J. E. Lyons and Mrs. Stephen Winan of St. Louis, two sons, William Miller of Schuyler, Neb., and John Miller of St. Louis.

IN delineating the merits of our clothes for men we are saved the necessity of looking far for their distinguishing attributes. Their character is so closely identified with exclusiveness. They rise to higher excellence, not by the stereotype methods, but by an inherent tendency and natural instinct to the contemplations of superior qualities and elegance.

Our tailormen are most distinguished in their profession. Great and various are their merits, possessing that genius and skill which is found only in the work of the custom tailors.

The new styles for spring and summer give the romantic young men who aspire to grace and beauty of dress great scope and opportunity for reaching that ambition.

HILDA

The Story of a Romantic Girl

BY IVAN WHIN.

Copyright, 1906, by Ivan Whin.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTER.

Hilda Manderson leaves her father's house near Richland, Mo., and comes to St. Louis. She leaves the train at Tower Grove Station and is traced to a Laclede car, to which she transferred from a Vandeventer car. Ed Elting, an operative of a detective agency, is unable to trace her further. She has been missing from home two weeks, and her father has employed the detectives to find her.

CHAPTER II.

The Woman With Green Eyes.

THE telephone rang. We had determined the future of Folk and were picking the next Governor of Missouri. I went to the desk phone and answered.

Police headquarters had called me on a chance that I knew Ed Elting's whereabouts.

I called him to the phone.

He talked briefly and then turned to me, his face alive with professional excitement.

"Say, they've got a line on my girl and want me down to Four Courts. Come along."

In the office of the Chief of Detectives we were shown a woman. She was languidly looking over the frames containing pictures of criminals. As we entered she glanced at us coolly and resumed her inspection of the photographs.

The first impression of her was distinction and elegance. I was startled when Big Kelly, who was in charge, bade her gruffly:

"Here, you, sit down!"

I saw that she was tall, 5 feet 8 or 9 inches high—a woman's hair is deceptive, you know. Her figure was good, but she moved with the grace of a lightly built creature. Her ungloved hands were long and delicate. She wore no rings save a thin flat band of gold on the wedding finger. Her clothes were in the latest mode, but quiet in color. Her hair was blond, in many shades, suggesting that peroxide of hydrogen had been applied long ago and not reapplied at the necessary intervals. Her eyebrows were very dark, very heavy, arched erratically and almost met. Her mouth was small and daintily bowed. The nose was irregular, long and thin. All this I saw in a glance. She turned her head slowly and looked steadily at Ed Elting, as though she would stare him down.

"Gee whiz!" he said softly.

Her gaze shifted to me and I saw what had startled him.

Her eyes were green. When I comprehended this I knew that we were in the presence of the most dangerous woman the police of America have had to deal with for a dozen years.

"English May, alias Eva Harrington, alias Margaret Wharton, alias Lady May Floyd and a thousand other aliases," I said softly.

"Just so," said Kelly.

"What's her lay now?" asked Elting, staring at her, but addressing Kelly.

"It's a new sort of second-story work. She picks up bright, pretty country girls and takes them to a city. She treats them fine and helps them to get jobs as high-class servants in swell houses. She goes to call on them to see if they are happy and well treated, makes the acquaintance of the mistress, gets the run of the place, pumps the girl about where jewelry is kept and when its handy to nip it and at the proper time swipes the stuff. You know the Mrs. Van Nold opera bag full of stuff? That was swiped all right. We thought the lady had hid her stuff and forgot where she put it, but it was May here that got it. Remember the Oldenburg's necklace and tiara? That was May, and it was a smooth job, all right. Mrs. Oldenburg said she'd a swore on a stack of Bibles she was the only soul knew where they was, and the drawer was locked when she went to get them to show her niece. May got them nearly a month before the loss was discovered, and her pigeon was still in the house. That so, May?"

"I ain't playing your cards, Kel."

"No, you needn't, May. The pot is mine as it is."

"Guess again, Kel. You make me out a pretty good un, but you ain't told it all. Have you got any evidence that'll go in court?"

The green eyes wavered for an instant and then she laughed. "You're bluffing," she said.

"Was Hilda Manderson one of her pigeons?" Elting asked.

"Yes. She's the latest. Tell us about her, May."

The woman laughed again. "Ain't you the wise one?" she said, shaking a scornful figer at him. You know so much, tell yourself.

"There are some things I don't know, May. I'll be frank with you. I know that you got hold of this girl somehow and when she went to work for Mrs. Kimball in Westmoreland as nursegirl you went to see her and told Mrs. Kimball that she was the daughter of a woman who died in your service and you felt responsible for her, and when she had an afternoon off last Monday you met her in Forest Park and walked with her to the World's Fair grounds and around by the Triple A clubhouse to Delmonico's, where you two had lemonade and sandwiches and you went back to Kimball's with her after dark and helped her to put the kids to bed and nipped the black box full of diamonds. And I know that the girl disappeared Tuesday, after Mrs. Kimball accused her of stealing the diamonds and I want to know where she is."

"Honest Kel, I don't know."

"Where did you get her?" asked Elting.

"Drop it," she said savagely. "I'm no broiler. I don't know your Hilda Manderson, never saw her, never had anything to do with her. You've routed me wrong." And she lounged into a more comfortable position, looking wearied and bored.

"Drop it," she said smilingly.

The detectives exchanged flashing eye signals and in an instant they had seized her roughly.

"What are you going to do?" she cried, a real terror blanching her face.

"Search you."

"I been searched. The matron searched me, buttons to buff." She struggled frantically in their arms.

"The matron didn't find anything. We will," said Kelly.

"O, Kelly, don't! Please don't!" she pleaded.

Hardened woman of the underworld, criminal and companion of criminals, daring as a man in the execution of robberies, masterful as a man in her use of means to her ends. She was now a woman full of shame, fighting against indignity.

There was no mistaking the meaning of her agitation. Kelly knew, Elting knew, I knew that the matron had not overlooked a single chance in the search upstairs and that English May carried not the smallest bit of plunder on her person.

She turned to me, her face wet with tears and white with fear.

"Help me!" she cried. "Don't let them! Oh, don't let them!"

I felt her shame; my heart went out in sympathy with her fear. I forgot the significance of her green eyes and all the miserable story of her crimes. I could not steel myself against her pleadings.

"She'll tell, Kelly," I whispered, laying a detaining hand on his hand wrenching at the cloth he could not unpin.

She caught the words and lifted her face to him, crying: "Kelly, listen, listen to him. Don't do that. Please, dear good Kelly. I'll tell. I'll tell everything."

"You bet you will," he said, but the hen withdrew their hands and she sank n a shuddering heap to the floor.

"Well?" he questioned coldly. "Why n't you tell?"

"I will, Kelly, I will," she sobbed. h, wait, I'll tell."

And we waited until she was calm ough to tell the fate of Hilda nderson.

St. Paul's Cornerstone.

The cornerstone of St. Paul's English Evangelical Church, King's highway and Gibson street, will be laid at 3 p. m. Wednesday. Rev. M. Rhodes, D. D., pastor of St. Mark's English Evangelical Lutheran Church, will deliver the sermon and conduct the ceremony. Rev. George H. Reen is the pastor of St. Paul's Church.

MORE than ONE MILLION people in the city of St. Louis and contiguous territory READ the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH EVERY Sunday.

WOMAN SAVES OLD TREE.

Mrs. J. Hal Lynch of Clayton, wife of a St. Louis architect, is keeping watch over an oak tree on the premises of Congressman Bartholdt to prevent its being cut down by a paving company.

The company has a contract to lay a granitoid sidewalk along Meramec street, and when it reached the oak an axman was called out to remove the "obstruction." Mrs. Lynch appeared on the scene and the woodman spared the tree at her command. Mrs. Lynch then appealed to her husband, to Congressman Bartholdt and to the legal department of the Civic League.

"GUN" CASES CLASSIFIED.

Concealed weapon carriers will be prosecuted in future whether the Prosecuting Attorney issues warrants or not. Chief of Police Gillaspy has instructed captains that in cases where those charged with this offense have no police records, they shall be taken before police judges.

The new order was due to the refusal of the Prosecuting Attorney to issue informations unless accused persons had police records. Police judges have as a rule imposed fines in such cases.

GAS FOR COOKING

Is Your Fuel Bill Low?

If Not—Make It So.

There is a reason for everything. Without a reason nothing would exist.

If your fuel bill is higher than your neighbor's there is a reason for it.

Below are the results of a test in cooking three breakfasts. One was cooked with coal, one with gasoline and the other with gas.

Coffee
Bacon Oatmeal Eggs

Coal	Gasoline	Gas
Time 50 minutes.	Time—25 minutes.	Time—20 minutes.
Fuel—¼ bu.	Fuel—(Nearly) 1 qt.	Fuel 19 cubic feet.
Cost—3 cents.	Cost—3¼ cents.	Cost—1 3-5 cents.

When gas will save you an amount as here shown for one cooking, what it will save you in one year certainly merits your consideration.

Save on fuel bills, save on time and work, and make your home more comfortable by ordering a Gas Range now.

JUDGE OPPOSES "TAINTED" MONEY

Thompson Resigns From Illinois Woman's College Because Carnegie Offer Accepted.

CHICAGO, May 29.—A dispatch from Jacksonville, Ill., says:

"Judge Owen P. Thompson of the Seventh Illinois Circuit, in a letter to President Harker of the Illinois Woman's College yesterday, resigned as a member of the Board of Trustees, giving as his reason the acceptance of the Carnegie offer of $25,000, conditional on the college raising $7500 additional. His letter discusses at length the policy of accepting gifts from 'tainted' sources and takes positive grounds against accepting money from such men as Carnegie and Rockefeller.

Judge Thompson's resignation was accepted.

GUNPOWDER TRUST NOW UNDER FIRE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., May 29.—The smokeless gunpowder trust and certain officials of the Navy Department are under fire. Charges against both were presented today to Former Attorney-General Monett, special counsel for the Interstate Commerce Commission, asking him to file pleadings showing that the Navy Department has been made a partner in a plan to defraud the National Government of many thousands of dollars through the sale of ordnance powder, protected by patents, to the Army and Navy departments by the Dupont powder trust.

J. D. Ellis of Peoria, Ill., representing Robert S. Waddell, an independent powder manufacturer, is the complainant.

WOMEN FAINTED AS TRICK RIDER FELL

HE DROPPED 35 FEET

Badly Bruised and Cut, but Says He Will Ride Again.

Francis J. Conley, one-legged trick bicycle rider, whose home is at 1014 Grattan street, St. Louis, fell 35 feet when doing the last part of his act at Budweiser Garden, Belleville, Monday night, and struck a granitoid pavement instead of the net. His shoulder was gashed, his neck badly scratched and his leg cut.

Women among the 1000 persons who saw the accident were so badly frightened that several of them fainted.

Conley's act consists in riding down an inclined plane, 125 feet in length, leaping a gap of five feet, climbing an inclined plane 35 feet high, letting his bicycle fall into one net and jumping from the little platform at the top of the plane into another net.

He did all of this Monday evening, including the final jump. Some spectators say that his foot caught in the first net and threw him out of line so that he fell to the pavement instead of the net awaiting him.

Conley, who was removed to his St. Louis home, says that someone had tampered with his ropes and that he suspects they were cut.

He was able to be about Tuesday and declared that he would ride again Tuesday evening.

MRS. MEYERS MUST HANG, MEN PLEAD

One Says He Will Have to Sit Up All Night if She Escapes.

More than one-half of Gov. Folk's mail each day consists of letters concerning the hanging of Aggie Myers, the Kansas City woman convicted of murdering her husband. The fate of the woman, judging from the letters, is a matter of absorbing interest to the husbands and wives of the State.

The women, without exception, protest against the hanging. The majority of men, from whom letters have now been received, insist she should be hanged. There are many, however, who say the Governor should commute the sentence, not for the sake of the woman, but for the sake of the State's good name.

One peculiar letter received from a St. Louis man, whose name the Governor refuses to disclose, says:

St. Louisan Protests.

"I hope you will not commute the sentence of Aggie Myers, who murdered her husband. Husband-murder has become entirely too frequent, and an example is needed for the wives. It is getting so no husband's life is safe, and I beg of you to allow this sentence of death to be carried out on this woman for the good effect it will have on women who are now plotting to get rid of their husbands.

"If this woman escapes the gallows, I, for one, will have to sit up all night in self-defense."

The women, as a unit, and many men, also, take the position that it is bad enough to hang a man, but the hanging of a woman would be revolting, and, instead of inspiring a respect for the law, would create a disregard for it.

A Delightful Garden Party.

Under the auspices and personal direction of the Board of Lady Managers for the benefit of the St. Louis Children's Hospital, a delightful garden party will be held in the open fields of Carrswold, Clayton, Mo., next Wednesday, May 30, from 2:30 to 10 p. m.

Among the many attractions will be a band throughout the afternoon, a beautiful and artistic English may pole dance, wonderful bucking ponies, automobile rides, free weight guessing, lemonade wells, candy booths, fortune told by the palm, crystal-gazing by a gypsy; "Kalhassi," the wonderful Greek magician, flower maidens, tobacco stalls, shooting gallery and many special and undivulged surprises.

At 4 p. m. a first-class variety show under the stage management of Mr. Jacob Mahler, including a double quartet from the Amphion Club, Smith Academy Banjo Club, a Japanese act, including the famous jiu-jitsu wrestling, etc.

Admission to the grounds, 50 cents; children, 25 cents; children's supper, 15 cents. Everybody is expected. In case of rain the entertainment will be postponed until the following day. Take Wellston, McPherson or Delmar cars and change to Clayton cars at De Baliviere avenue.

LOOSE TEETH

The most dread disease to the dental profession is pyorrhea, commonly known as scurvy. In this disease the gums have become congested and recede from the teeth, causing them to become loose and in time to fall out. Some dentists recommend the "pulling cure," causing many to wear plates unnecessarily. I successfully treat this disease, tighten the teeth, relieve irritation and pus formations, and where there are two or three teeth in each jaw, build a full set of artificial teeth around them that will look like and answer all purposes of natural teeth.

Dr. Hunter makes teeth without plates and regulates irregular and crooked teeth.

POWDER EXPLOSION KILLS A WORKMAN

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., May 29.—A terrific explosion occurred at the California Powder Works, three miles north of this city, yesterday, a short time before the employes quit work for the day. Michael Maelson was instantly killed and Patrick Ryan was so badly burned that he is expected to die before morning. Both were workmen.

The explosion occurred in a blasting powder mill, and had it happened five minutes before, when 10,000 pounds of black powder were in the mill, the loss of life probably would have been great. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

ARREST DEFUNCT BANK'S PRESIDENT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JOPLIN, Mo., May 29.—George W. Layne, president of the defunct Joplin Savings Bank, was arrested last night as he was boarding a train for St. Louis.

The complaint, made by a depositor whose account was $600, was that deposits were received while the bank was in a failing condition and that more than 25 per cent of the bank's capital as loaned to a single person, the borrower being the Ozark Coal and Railway Co., of which Layne himself is chief owner.

Hare Superstitions.

In most parts of Europe it is considered unlucky for a hare to cross the road in front of a traveler. Among the Romans this omen was so unfortunate that if a man starting upon a journey espied a hare on the road before him he would return and wait until the following day to begin his journey.

Preserving Pork Ribs.

"We reached Chicago on the morning of April 15, and the very first day, through a letter from Mr. Sinclair, I obtained from the relative of a man up in one of the packing houses some valuable formulas for renovating putrid meats and preserving dubious meat. These formulas were all turned over to the commissioners. Here is the recipe for preserving pork ribs for export:

"One hundred gallons of water; 30 pounds of salt; 15 pounds of saltpeter; 20 pounds of borax; 20 pounds of boracic acid.

"Kidneys are thrown into this mixture until there is no room for more. From this man I also learned that when most spoiled meat is received in the summer it is at once taken to the 'morgue' in what is known as 'No. 13' house. Then it goes to the sausage room, then to the cellar of No. 32 house. There it is renovated and the stench removed, when it passes on to its ultimate destiny—the feeding of the world.

"Spoiled smoked meat goes to smokehouse No. 2. Sour hams are auctioned off.

"Pickled trimmings, as we showed the commissioners by witnesses, are made of the bruises cut out from meat and diseased spots, such a lumpy jaws. For every 100 pounds of sausage, this witness told us, 15 pounds of salt were used, two pounds of sugar, four pounds of borax, one pound of boracic acid and one pound of saltpeter. The cure for hog livers for export, dissolved in 2240-gallon vats of water, is: 480 pounds of salt; 125 pounds of borax; 30 pounds of boracic acid; 15 pounds of saltpeter.

"There are other formulas equally appetizing which are submitted to the commissioners, and will doubtless form part of their report.

"One of the witnesses brought by us before the commissioners was a man who had been the representative for three years of the Bureau of Charities in the packing-house district. He testified as to the home surroundings of the workers, the utter squalor about them, the stench which is always present and the streets which are filled with pools of stinking water. He gave a specific case of a child that fell from a sidewalk in Packingtown and was drowned in front of his very home, saying that he recalled the case because his society had paid the funeral bill.

Killed in Lard Vats.

"This witness also told the commissioners that he knew of a case in which two members of the same family had fallen into the lard vats and been partially rendered into lard. He had forgotten the names of the men, but he said they could be procured by going back over the records of the society. The first to lose his life was a little boy, 9 years old, who stumbled into one of the rendering vats while taking dinner to his father. The father fell in some months later.

"There is no telling how many men met death in this way. There was a case only the week before we reached Chicago in which a man fell into a tank, and the room was closed while the remnants—mostly bones—were fished out. My husband will tell you about the time he had proving this death."

Mr. Bloor said: "I heard of the case in a saloon, and after drinking with a workman who was in the place until he got pretty communicative, he told me he would take me to the man who was working beside the unfortunate fellow, and who helped fish out what was left of him. He did take me to this man, to whom I represented myself as the agent of a benefit company. I gave the commission the name of the witness.

"He readily stated that he had witnessed the death and gave me the name of the widow. I asked him if she had any money.

"'O, yes,' he replied. 'The company fixed it up by giving the widow $250.'

"About this time the man's wife came out and got the notion into her head that a company spy came to see if they would talk about what went on at the plant. She forced her husband to stop talking, and cursed me until a crowd gathered and I had to take myself off.

"I marvel that there are not deaths every day. The sides of the rendering vats are only raised a foot and a half from the floor and the room is full of steam and vapors. The openings for shoveling in the scraps and trimmings to be rendered are several feet long and nearly as wide and the floors are so covered with grease that it is hard to walk without slipping."

Mrs. Bloor, consulting her memorandum book, then told of the testimony submitted to the commission by a man who had worked for some years on the killing floor in one of the big packing houses.

His first employment there was to pick up legs, and the commissioners heard his story in full. He told them that "slunk," or unborn calves, were always utilized.

"They are taken out of the carcasses and doped up," were his exact words. Then they went to the potted chicken and other departments.

Deodorized Chicken.

"After this the witness went to the produce department, where chickens, butter, eggs and butterine are handled. He said that when chickens came in large quantities many of them would be dead and spoiled. When they were so far decomposed that they could not be handled without dropping apart, they were taken to the refrigerating plant and frozen solid. Then they were deodorized and turned out as canned chicken—not potted chicken, but chicken in pieces. He said formaldehyde and other stuff was used 'to take the smell away.'

"There was a great business in this department in rotten eggs, according to his story. When the eggs were received they were turned over to girls, who 'candled' them and determined whether they were good or bad. The bad eggs were broken into pails and 'doped up' until they had no longer any odor. Then they were sold to bakers and confectioners for pies. The sister of this witness corroborated his testimony.

"There were several grades in the butterine department, he said. The principal ingredient, of course, was oleo. Oleo is made from scraps of fat swept from the floor and barrel scrapings of strong butter, which had been deodorized.

"I wrote out the testimony of a very intelligent man, taken before a witness who did not wish to go before the commission, and presented it myself. He had worked for 17 years on the killing floor and said that he had often 'killed dead cattle.' This was in one of the trust houses, and according to him, four or five of these dead cattle were usually cut up every day. Cattle came up so badly diseased that they were hard to handle. He is what is known as a 'header,' it being his business to cut the heads from the bodies of the animals.

"Often in doing the cutting, when the carcass was that of an animal which had suffered from lumpy jaw, he would strike into the abscesses accidentally and the putrid matter would fly all over him. These carcasses went right along, he said, and everything was used but the abscess. The tongues are sold as high-priced tongues.

"This man told something of labor conditions which are just now most depressing in Packingtown. Although a skilled worker and one of the best paid, he only earned $7.90 the week we saw him.

"Miss Bertha Wilkins, a newspaper woman, who sought and obtained work in the trimmed meat department of one of the trust establishments, appeared before the commission. She said the room was kept at a temperature of at least five degrees below freezing and described conditions which were simply unprintable.

79 Cents for Two Days.

"All the work was piece work, and the defilement of meat was open. She also told of grossest indecencies. For the two days she worked, and she worked at top speed to see how much it was possible to earn under the wage scale, she got 79 cents."

Mr. Bloor described conditions as he had learned them from employes, tending to show that there was absolutely no barrier between the sexes, and that such a thing as modesty was impossible amid the surroundings of the workers. He told a story which bears out in every particular the Washington story that some of the features of the Nell-Reynolds report are too revolting for publication—too revolting, almost, to be believable.

A Thought for the Day.

HOMICIDE VERDICT IN ABBOTT CASE

Witnesses Say Hein Was Backing Out of Billiard Hall When Killed.

The Coroner's jury rendered a verdict of homicide Tuesday in the case of Alexander Hein, killed by William B. Abbott in the latter's billiard hall and poolroom at 106 North Sixth street. Abbott was taken back to the Four Courts holdover, where he has been a prisoner since his arrest at his mother's home early Monday.

At the inquest Abbott repeated his story of self-defense, saying that Hein was menacing him and was drawing his hand, containing, as he supposed, a weapon, from a rear pocket when he fired. The trouble was caused, he said, by a dispute over a dollar bill which Hein and a companion each said he had lost.

Three witnesses, one an employe of Abbott, told much the same story. They were George Maitland, Elmer Schulz and Frank Kline, the last named night clerk.

George Rogers, who was with Hein, conflicted with Abbott and the other witnesses, and said Hein was backing out of the room when Abbott fired.

"He had his hand back in his pocket," said Rogers, "but he had it there only to put two bills in his pocket which he had been showing me."

Rogers also said that the only threats Hein had made were of a general nature, and that he gave Abbott no reason, in Rogers' opinion, to think that his life was in any danger.

Rogers completed the identification of Hein Tuesday. The young man was the son of a fireman, was 19 years old, and lived at 5304 Blair avenue.

Heart Weakness

The action of the heart depends upon the heart nerves and muscles. When from any cause they become weak or exhausted, and fail to furnish sufficient power, the heart flutters, palpitates, skips beats; and in its effort to keep up its work, causes pain and distress, such as smothering spells, short breath, fainting, pain around heart, arm and shoulders. The circulation is impeded, and the entire system suffers from lack of nourishment.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure makes a heart strong and vigorous by strengthening these nerves and muscles.

"I had palpitation and pain around my heart, and the doctors said it was incurable. I don't believe it now, for after taking six bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, three bottles of the Nervine and three boxes of the Nerve and Liver Pills I am entirely cured, and feel better than I have for five years, and it is all due to these remedies. I want you to know that your medicines cured me. It relieved me from the first dose, and I kept right on till the pain in my chest was gone, and I kept on feeling better even after I quit taking it." JOHN H. SHERMAN, Belding, Mich.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails he will refund your money.

HOW THE CHICAGO PACKERS PILED UP THEIR MILLIONS

THE ARMOUR PLANT—One of the most widely known in the business, established by Philip D. Armour, who began business life as a cattle dealer and by hard work and remarkable physical endurance, built up what really was the pioneer in the packing industry. At the time of his death he was estimated to be worth from $50,000,000 to $70,000,000, but his estate was appraised at $15,000,000. There is no doubt, however, that the elder Armour accumulated $50,000,000 in the business now conducted by his son, J. O. Armour.

THE SWIFT PLANT—Founded by Gustavus Swift, a down-East butcher and breeder. He and his younger brother, E. C. Swift, in 1874, improved on the Morris frozen-meat scheme. They then went into the business of killing and selling and rapidly accumulated great fortunes. All the members of the firm were indicted by a Federal jury in 1905 for entering into a conspiracy in restraint of trade with Nelson Morris & Co. The fortunes of the Swifts are estimated at between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000.

THE NELSON MORRIS PLANT—Established by Nelson Morris, who was a drover when he arrived in Chicago. He hired out to cattle buyers and took care of their droves. His first stroke of business was buying broken-down and diseased cattle. This laid the foundation of his fortune. He became associated with the Armours, Swifts and Allertons, but afterward carried on an independent business until he went into the Beef Trust with his former associates. The wealth of the Morrises is estimated at $30,000,000.

JAMES E. SCRIPPS, PUBLISHER, DEAD

DETROIT, Mich., May 29.—James E. Scripps, founder and for many years publisher of the Evening News of this city, now combined with the former Detroit Tribune and the Detroit News, and a former director of the Associated Press, died at his home on Trumbull avenue in this city today after a long illness, aged 71 years. Myelitis, an inflammation of the spinal cord, from which Mr. Scripps has been suffering for a year, was the cause of death.

Mr. Scripps went to California last fall in the hope of benefiting his health, but grew worse steadily during his stay there and returned here April 10. The disease progressed very rapidly after he reached home and within a few days he was compelled to take to his bed. For the past week he had been in only a semi-conscious condition. Mr. Scripps suffered no pain at any time during his illness.

He is survived by his widow, one son and three married daughters.

"APOLLO" Interior Piano Player

YOU ask "why" it is the only player-piano to buy? We answer—If the greatest pianist in the world were to give a concert on a 5-octave piano, would musicians go? They'd pronounce it unmusical, fakish! All mechanical players only use that many octaves except the

"Apollo" Piano Player

It plays the entire keyboard of your piano—7⅓ octaves—88 notes. Also plays any piece of music in five different keys and rewinds the music roll automatically.

Columns of newspaper advertising or the most elaborate catalogue ever published cannot make other players as good as the "Apollo."

This wonderful instrument, "which makes musicians of us all," is built in two models—one in the form of an easily moved separate cabinet, adjustable to any square, upright or grand piano, but not fastened to it and easily rolled away when hand playing is desired; also in the form of a modern upright piano with the playing mechanism concealed within the case back of the music desk, always ready for either hand playing or automatic playing.

REST YOUR KIDNEYS.

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Save yourself perhaps years of suffering by taking your Kidney or Liver under care before they develop into badly diseased organs.

Put some urine in a glass or bottle. After it has stood 24 hours, if it is cloudy, or contains a reddish-brown sediment, or if particles float about in it, your kidneys are in a disordered condition, and unable to do their work, and if not attended to at once Bright's disease, diabetes, rheumatism, gout, uric acid, inflammation of the bladder, gall-stones or urinary troubles will develop and prove fatal in a short time.

Safe Cure is the only absolutely safe and certain cure for all these forms of kidney, liver and bladder diseases. It is purely vegetable, free from harmful drugs found in many so-called kidney cures, contains no sediment and is pleasant to take.

Read These Words of Thankfulness:

Two years ago in my business as miller I severely strained my back and for months was confined to the house, most of the time in bed. My kidneys and liver were just as bad as could be and live. Urine very highly colored, sometimes bloody, sometimes with albuminous discharge, with sedimentary deposits like brick dust. I paid out $180.00 for doctors' bills and then left them all and completely cured myself with 14 bottles of Warner's Safe Cure. There is not its equal in medicine for liver or kidney troubles.

I cannot say enough in praise of the wonderful effects of Warner's Safe Cure. Am perfectly well now. JAS. BRYANT, Kingston, Ont.

BARON FORCES MISS MAGEE TO PAY FOR TITLE

AUNT RAISES THE FUNDS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 29.—All the stores that the Baron Reidl Von Riedinau's wedding to Miss Louise Magee was to be a case of an illustrious old-world title-seeking penniless young American for her beauty alone, are off, as the Baron is reported to have announced that the money must be forthcoming before the wedding could take place.

He is alleged to have demanded a dowry of a quarter of a million dollars, but finally compromised on a hundred thousand.

The money was raised by Mrs. Christopher L. Magee, who considered the price small compared to having the door opened to the inner circles of Roman society, where she has elected to spend the income from the millions of the late Chris Magee, made in Pittsburg street railway business.

The Baron is secretary to the Austro-Hungarian legation at Rome., Mrs. Magee went to Rome shortly after the death of her husband and rented a palace there. She has a lease on it for a number of years yet. She became acquainted with the Baron and arranged the match between him and her niece, Miss Louise Magee.

Miss Magee had been engaged to Richard Jennings of this city, son of the millionaire oil magnate. Mrs. Magee wanted to get into European society, particularly Roman society, so she managed to get the young woman off to Europe and break the Pittsburg match. Then she arranged the match with the Baron. As his family is one of the best in Europe it was a guarantee of social success for the widow.

Lawyers Got Busy.

Everything has been going along swimmingly, according to the best-informed ones in Pittsburg's higher social circles, until, recently, when it came time for the Baron's lawyers to get interested in the matter. European custom demands that lawyers shall arrange all these little affairs and the Baron's lawyers wanted all there was in sight. Moreover, they had to be assured the money was ready.

They wanted $250,000 for their client, but that sum was impossible. Miss Magee had no fortune of her own. Her aunt could not readily afford to put up so much, as her Roman establishment costs her the big end of her annual income. They finally managed to get it scaled down to $100,000, and the Baron would not take off another cent.

Mrs. Magee raised the money, but the deal has thrown a chill over Pittsburg society. Everybody in this city is so used to doing things with money and getting things for cash that everybody felt rejoiced at the prospect of a real love match between an American girl and a foreign nobleman.

Moreover, Mrs. Magee was one of the loudest protestants when the Earl of Yarmouth raised a kick and refused to go ahead with the Thaw nuptials until his prospective mother-in-law had settled a million dollars on him.

At that time Mrs. Magee declared that it was a shame that a monetary condition should be allowed to cut any capers with such a sacred thing as the affections of the heart. Now that she has been compelled to dig under the carpet for an extra odd hundred thousand Pittsburg society feels inclined to smile.

But everything is lovely now. The wedding of the Baron Riedl von Riedenau, secretary to the American Legation in the Eternal City, and plain little Louise Magee, a Pittsburg girl, will take place June 6 in Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church. A civil ceremony will also be performed by Mayor Guthrie if he is willing. If not, some other proper civil authority will have to perform it.

The Baron is now residing at the Duquesne Club in this city and is being feasted and wined by society a dozen times a day.

Rev. John B. Toomay, pastor of the Fountain Park Congregational Church, is planning to spend his vacation this year in a tramping tour through Central Missouri, and is organizing a club of young men to accompany him.

Pastor Toomay made such a walk alone last year, going from St. Louis to Kansas City. He is now giving walking lessons to the candidates for this year's excursion, and they expect to start late in June. The plan is to carry no baggage and only sufficient money to pay for board and lodging.

ASK U. S. TO APPROPRIATE $94,346,573

$25,460,991 FOR CANAL

Also Provides $17,318,976 for River and Harbor Improvements.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The sundry civil appropriation bill was completed and Chairman Tawney was authorized by the Appropriations Committee to present it to the House today.

It is the largest sundry civil bill ever reported, carrying $94,346,573, of which $25,460,991 is for work on the Panama Canal. The amount carried is $11,070,003 less than the estimates from the various departments. The canal appropriation is to be reimbursed to the treasury from the proceeds of the sale of canal bonds, which have been authorized to the aggregate amount of $130,000,000.

For river and harbor work, heretofore authorized and contracted for, there is appropriated $17,318,976, which is $6,774,844 in excess of the amount available this year.

For new public buildings heretofore authorized and the repair of buildings, $5,170,583 is appropriated, a reduction of $2,806,601 from the current appropriation under this head.

Among the items of appropriations for the canal are: Pay of officers and employes on the isthmus, other than skilled and unskilled laborers, $3,328,088; skilled labor, $5,493,020; unskilled labor, $4,148,459; purchase and delivery of supplies and equipment, $10,347,511; loan to the Panama Railroad for new equipment, $1,000,000.

The bill provides for the appointment by the Attorney-General, if the Secretary of the Treasury desires, of a Solicitor of Customs at an annual salary of $5000 and such assistant solicitors as are necessary, at salaries of $3000.

M'KITTRICK STAYS ON TERMINAL BOARD DESPITE HIS REBATES

Mayor Wells Says Head of Wholesale Drygoods House That Got Mysterious Bundles of Money From the Railroads, Is Hard Worker and Satisfactory.

MR. McKITTRICK HAS NOT A THING TO SAY

At Trial of Burlington Officials in Kansas City for Giving Rebates McKittrick Told of Money Received, but Said He Didn't Know What It Was For.

Hugh McKittrick, vice-president of the Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co., will not be ousted from his membership in the Municipal Bridge and Terminals Commission because a salaried employe of his house was convicted in the Federal Courts of Kansas City of obtaining rebates in violation of the Interstate Commerce Law.

Whether McKittrick will, of his own volition, resign from the commission as a result of the episode is not known. He declines to discuss the question "in any shape, manner or form."

"Mr. McKittrick is an invaluable member of the commission," said Mayor Wells to a Post-Dispatch reporter. "He is now chairman of the subcommittee which is drawing up the second report of the commission. The other members of the committee are J. D. Bascom and R. S. Colnon. He has been one of the hardest workers on the commission, and his work has given the utmost satisfaction. His thorough acquaintance with the shipping interests of St. Louis has given the commission a distinct advantage and the people should congratulate themselves on having so able and willing and so valuable a man serve them without compensation in a quasi-public capacity. I strongly admire the work he has done."

Work Unimpaired.

"Will Mr. McKittrick's connection with the rebate cases in Kansas City impair the public's confidence in the commission's work?" was asked.

"The commission's work will stand for itself and be credited or discredited on its results," was the answer. "If the public does not like the results it will indeed be very hard to please."

R. V. Shapleigh, another member of the commission, agreed with the Mayor.

"I do not think that McKittrick's experience in this rebate case will impair his usefulness or warp his judgment in any question that may come before the commission," he said.

"Will that connection impair the confidence of the public in the work of the commission?" was asked.

"That is a subject I must decline to discuss."

Some time ago the Federal grand jury at Kansas City indicted George H. Crosby, former traffic manager of the Burlington Railroad; George L. Thomas, a freight broker of New York, and L. B. Taggert, his clerk, on a charge of negotiating for and receiving rebates from the railroads for certain big shippers. This was a violation of the Interstate Commerce Law, which provides that every shipper shall have equal rights and privileges. The giving of rebates, that is, the paying back to the shipper of a part of the money he paid for transportation, had the effect of allowing him a special rate which was not granted to all shippers and was thus in direct violation of the Interstate Commerce Law.

The cases of the indicted men came up in Kansas City last week. Thomas H. McKittrick and his brother, Hugh McKittrick, on the witness stand admitted they had employed the defendant, Thomas, at a salary of $500 a year to get for them from the railroads whatever was coming to them. As a result of Thomas' activity, the McKittricks testified they received "from unknown sources" sums aggregating $10,000.

Freight Broker Convicted.

Thomas and Taggert were convicted of violating the Interstate Commerce Law and are now awaiting sentence.

Hugh McKittrick was appointed a member of the Municipal Bridge and Terminals Commission by the Mayor immediately after the Municipal Assembly, in answer to public opposition to the bridge arbitrary, created the commission. The work of the commission, as planned, was to rid St. Louis of the extortionate charges imposed by the Terminal Railroad Association which holds a monopoly of the rail and water avenues into St. Louis from the East.

At the outset a free bridge across the river was suggested as the only sure remedy for the arbitrary. This, it was pointed out, would supply competition for the River Crossing Monopoly. The commission did not favor the free bridge plan.

The advocates of the free bridge declared openly in speeches that the reason more of St. Louis' prominent shippers were not favoring the free bridge was because they were receiving railroad and terminal rebates; that is, that a part of the money they paid as transportation charges was returned to them by the railroads or terminal associations.

ILLINOIS STRIKE'S END APPROACHES

Abrogation of Tri-State Agreement Announced to Be First Step.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, May 29.—The cancellation yesterday of the tri-state agreement, under which the coal operators of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio agreed to stand together, was followed by the announcement from the operators that the coal strike in Illinois and Indiana will be settled this week, and that the operation of the mines will resume the first of next week. The scale of 1903 will be allowed the miners.

Indiana operators were not represented at the meeting, but J. C. Kirkpatrick, president of the Indiana Coal Operators' Association, sent a letter saying that settlement would be reached within 48 hours and that the scale of 1903 would be paid. He said the miners had conceded 17 out of the 24 points contended for by the operators.

In return for the granting of the 1903 scale, the Illinois miners agree to pay the wages of shotfirers and to ask for a repeal of the law at the next session of the Legislature. They also agreed to indemnify the operators for any loss caused through the action of pit bosses in calling unauthorized strikes. These strikes have been a sore spot with the operators, and under the new agreement it is stipulated that the union shall be held responsible for the conduct of the miners.

In Illinois 55,000 men will be affected by the agreement. In Indiana, 17,000 men are affected.

St. John's Sodality.

The Young Ladies' Sodality of St. John's Parish will give a euchre, followed by a dance, Wednesday evening, at the school hall, Sixteenth and Walnut streets.

GUMBERTS SOUGHT AFTER A FIGHT

Neighboring Saloon Keeper Seriously Beaten Just After Midnight.

Mark Gumberts, owner of a hotel near Delmar Garden and proprietor of the Louisiana Club at 6601 Delmar boulevard, is being sought by the police following a fight early Tuesday with Jacob Mueller, proprietor of a saloon at 6603 Delmar boulevard, adjoining the club. The quarrel is said to have arisen after Mueller's assertion that the club interfered with the business of "legitimate saloons."

Mueller is at his home on Olive street road with a fractured skull, and is in a critical condition. He thinks the blow which caused the fracture was given with the butt of a revolver or metal "knucks."

Jacob Mueller Jr., son of the wounded man, gave the following account Tuesday to a Post-Dispatch reporter of his father's version of the alleged encounter with Gumberts:

Struck From the Rear.

"Father said he closed the saloon at about 12:30 o'clock and started toward the corner, intending to take a Suburban car home. As he passed Gumberts' place, Gumberts was standing in front with a crowd of men and stopped him to ask if it was true that father was kicking against clubs like the Louisiana. Father said he was—that they interfered with the business of legitimate saloons. He started on across the tracks, and Gumberts ran up behind him and struck him. Some men helped him to a doctor's office and then he was brought home."

A bartender at the Louisiana Club told a Post-Dispatch reporter Tuesday that Gumberts was not there and that he had no idea where he had gone.

The police have been unable to find a witness to the fight.

Gumberts was in the Morgan Club recently, at Jefferson avenue and Chestnut street, when he engaged in an altercation with a traveling man named Waterbury, who was in the place with some chorus girls. Waterbury did not appear in Police Court to prosecute the case and was fined by default. Gumberts was dismissed.

LAWYER'S SON AND PUGILIST IN PRIZE RING

Finish Fight Takes Place on Island in River Six Miles Above Alton.

ENDED IN FIFTH ROUND

Son of Attorney Too Much for Antagonist, Who Lacked Endurance.

EACH HAD WAGERED $500

Fighters, Seconds and Spectators Went to Island on Chartered Boat.

In the heart of the wilderness of a lonely island in the middle of the Mississippi River, six miles above Alton, Ill., free from interruption by the officers of the law from either State, Harvey Robinson, son of John H. Robinson, a Chicago attorney, residing at 1678 East Sixty-second street, Chicago, and John Murphy, a Cincinnati pugilist, fought a terrific finish fight Monday afternoon. The fight was for $500 a side.

The fight was the culmination of long-standing enmity between the two men, who fought with all the ferocity of two enraged animals. The battle lasted five rounds, Robinson winning with a terrific blow over the heart which sent his adversary spinning towards the ropes, over which he fell backwards and hung as if lifeless while the referee slowly counted ten. Murphy was then carried to the boat, where he was bathed in cold water and his muscles rubbed vigorously until he finally regained consciousness.

The men fought in a squared arena, four trees serving as improvised posts for the ropes. The thick foliage of the overhanging limbs obscured the sky and it seemed like twilight on the lonely and thickly wooded island, though the sun shone brightly overhead. The fighters with their friends, sporting men from Peoria, Cincinnati and Alton, chartered the yacht Rosalie at Alton Monday noon after Milt Kinney, a well-known pugilist of Alton was referee and the wager of $500 was posted with him. Only 25 men witnessed the fight.

Went by Boat From Alton.

The party left from the Market street dock at Alton in the yacht Rosalie at 3 p. m. The boxing gloves and other implements of fistic warfare were neatly packed in two soap boxes in order not to attract attention. After about 45 minutes the boat approached the lower end of Silver Island, the scene of the battle, and landed about the middle. The party left the boat in charge of Capt. Fluent and journeyed to the center of the island, which is almost a half mile in width. A half hour was spent searching for a suitable spot, which was finally selected in the thickest part of the woods, where the ground seemed solid and the underbrush was not so dense.

The boxes were then opened, and while the ropes were being placed around the trees and securely fastened the two fighters removed their clothes and proceeded to prepare for the battle. Each wore a small pair of black trunks. Murphy wore a green sash at his belt. George Deluth of Alton was Murphy's second and Dr. Gardner, a well-known sporting man of St. Louis, attended Robinson in his corner. They discovered before the fight began that they had forgotten to bring towels and a long tablecloth was brought from the yacht and torn in half. Then some overhanging branches caused another delay, and an ax was brought from the yacht and the branches cut off. It was almost 4 o'clock before the men entered the ring. They agreed to fight according to the Marquis of Queensbury rules, and the battle was to be to the finish.

Sparring in First Round.

In the first round both men were active on their feet—Robinson on the defensive almost all the round, with Murphy striking at him with terrific but ineffective blows. There was hardly a clinch in the round, and the two fighters simply stood and slugged each other, regardless of science or skill.

Weights were not considered in the fight, but both weighed about 150 pounds. At the last of the first round it appeared that Murphy had a shade the better of Robinson. Both fought their hardest and it was no sparring match. While Robinson landed many blows on Murphy's head, the latter found many openings on Robinson's body and administered lots of punishment. The timekeeper called the round at the end of three minutes and the fighter's seconds pushed convenient stumps into their respective corners. During the intervening minute bottles of river water were poured over their perspiring bodies.

In the second round Murphy still held his advantage and although the round was clearly his, he showed signs of weakening. In this round hardly a precious moment was lost in idle sparring. The men fought continually and brutally, hardly stopping for a breath. Murphy followed up a good advantage and hit Robinson two fierce jabs on the jaw. Robinson fell and took the count for seven.

Murphy Lacked Endurance.

But he jumped up and finished the round strong and when time was called he was as fresh as he was at the beginning.

In the third round Murphy began to show his lack of endurance. He was on the defensive almost the entire round and he clinched many times with Robinson to save himself. Robinson seemed to have been imbued with renewed vigor and he fought more viciously than he did in the other two rounds. They struggled back and forth across the ring sparring little and striking tremendous blows.

At the end of this round Murphy was bleeding freely about the face and Robinson's arm and shoulder were covered with blood. Just before time was called each became angry at the other and amidst profanity and groans they rained blows on each other. This round was clearly in Robinson's favor.

When time was called for the beginning of the fourth round, Robinson rushed from his corner like a tiger and from the beginning to the end of this round the fighting was fast and brutal. Both men fought with a fury seldom seen in the prize ring. Staggering blows were dealt each other with noticeable effect upon Murphy, who began to show that he was becoming groggy. He clinched and hung onto Robinson at every opportunity.

Helpless in Last Round.

It seemed at one time in the round that Murphy would recover, but a heavy blow on the jaw sent him to his knees and from that time it was plain that it would hardly be a question of another round until he would be out. The calling of time saved Murphy and during the minute's rest his seconds worked hard to get him in good condition.

In the beginning of the fifth round Robinson rushed his opponent and was on the offensive the entire time. While Murphy simply sparred, Robinson dealt him staggering blows about the head and body and he stood the terrible punishment longer than the spectators anticipated. In the last part of the round Robinson struck him a crushing blow on the nose. Murphy fell to the ground and took the count of nine. He was almost out when he arose to resume the fight and he simply staggered around the ring in his weakened condition while Robinson followed him, waiting for a good opportunity to deliver the knockout blow.

It came, and when Murphy left a good opening Robinson struck him over the heart and sent him staggering many feet backwards until he fell over the ropes, where he hung suspended while Referee Kinney slowly counted him out and Robinson was declared the winner.

Murphy was unconscious for nearly 15 minutes and he was carried to the boat where cold water was dashed in his face and his muscles were rubbed vigorously to start circulation.

CANNON PLACES HOUSE MEMBERS UNDER ARREST

Issues Blanket Warrant When He Fears He Lacks Quorum.

PAGES BRING THEM IN

Had Baseball Park Raided and 22 Congressmen Were Captured.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Members of the House were actually placed under arrest and brought before the bar of the House last night, Speaker Cannon issued a blanket warrant for their arrest and the sergeant-at-arms gathered them in.

The House had been droning along on a bill providing for compulsory education of the youth of the District of Columbia. Representative Williams, the minority leader, had been conducting a filibuster in a mild manner and everything was lovely until about 5 o'clock, when members began to disappear, going home to dinner.

When a motion to adjourn was made by Representative Payne of New York, Speaker Cannon, anticipating a point of "no quorum" from Mr. Williams, declared that the House refused to adjourn.

"The doors will be closed, the sergeant-at-arms will arrest absentees and bring them before the bar of the House and the clerk will call the roll," ordered the Speaker.

For two hours and 35 minutes the House waited for a quorum, the Speaker getting madder and hungrier every minute. He issued a blanket warrant for the arrest of every absent member.

After half an hour's wait a diminutive page came in with Representative "Cy" Sulloway of New Hampshire, the tallest man in the House. He is more than seven feet.

"Mr. Speaker," said the page, temporarily an assistant sergeant-at-arms, in shrill, childish voice, "I have under arrest Representative Sulloway of New Hampshire."

Sulloway's Plight.

The page hardly reached up to Mr. Sulloway's coat tails and even the Speaker had to laugh at the little captor of the giant. The usual motion to discharge him from arrest and permit him to vote was made and Mr. Sulloway added one to the "those present."

Other members were brought in one by one and in pairs until a sergeant-at-arms arrived bringing in Representative Wallace of Arkansas. Mr. Wallace was protesting bitterly against being arrested.

"I've already voted," Mr. Wallace exclaimed to the sergeant-at-arms.

"I'm too old a bird to be caught with that," the sergeant-at-arms said. Mr. Wallace was waltzed up to the bar of the House and after being discharged from arrest was ordered to vote.

"I've voted already," Mr. Wallace protested, and an examination of the roll-call showed he was correct.

Members were compelled to leave dinners half eaten and go to the Capitol. One member was routed out of the bathtub by an insistent sergeant-at-arms. Finally the necessary number appeared, and, after passing the bill, the House adjourned.

On Saturday last the sergeants-at-arms raided the baseball park and captured some 22 members of the House who were needed to make up a quorum so that the House could adjourn.

Representative Sibley and a party were taken from a box and made to go back. Mr. Sibley's party started to the house in his automobile and it exceeded the speed limits. A bicycle policeman held it up and wanted to arrest the party, but when told that it was already under arrest by order of the House he withdrew.

ARTIST'S IMPRESSIONS OF THE PLAINTIFFS, MOSTLY WIVES, ON DEFAULT DAY IN THE DIVORCE COURTS

PLAINTIFF ADMITS SHE WANTS DIVORCE SO SHE CAN RE-WED

Mrs. Lynch Told Judge Taylor She Wanted to Marry as Soon as Possible, but Her Case Was Taken Under Advisement — Another Woman Acknowledged She Had Been Divorced Before.

Wives and husbands, mostly wives, whose divorce cases are on the default dockets of Judge Taylor's and Judge Hough's courts, were busy Tuesday and Monday telling the judges why they ought to be freed.

Most of those coming before Judge Taylor were asked, particularly such as were reasonably young and fairly attractive, whether another plunge into matrimony was the moving motive in seeking a divorce. All of them denied it, except Mrs. Mattie Lynch of 2929½ Olive street.

When Judge Taylor asked her, "Are you engaged to be married again?" Mrs. Lynch's eyes dropped. Looking up again, her eyes met the eyes of the Judge. She laughed and blushed.

"Yes, sir, I am," she said.

The Judge smiled and blushed a little himself.

"How soon do you intend to get married?" he asked, still smiling.

"As soon as I can," said Mrs. Lynch, appealingly, not forgetting that it was in the power of the tantalizing Judge to say whether she ever should or not.

Parted on Friendly Terms.

Mrs. Lynch had told the Judge about parting on friendly terms from her first husband, James Lynch, at Birmingham, Ala., in 1893, to go for a stay with relatives in Memphis, Tenn.; of letters which never came; of her return to Birmingham only to find that her husband had gone away and of having never seen him since.

Mrs. Lynch's daughter, Gertrude, pretty and stylish, who said she was 17, was a witness for her. The case was taken under advisement.

Judge Taylor stopped the case of Mrs. Frankie J. Brady against Alfred F. Brady when Mrs. Brady admitted that, although her devoutness as a Catholic had caused trouble between her husband and herself, that she had already been divorced from one husband. He passed the case to Tuesday for a more thorough inquiry.

Mrs. Brady said that her husband objected so strongly to her sending her daughter by a former marriage to the Catholic Church that he became enraged when she went and smashed statuettes of angels and tore up prayer books which had been given to the girl. Her husband had complained, she said, that he was "it" in every house but his own, and had declared that he was going to be "it" there and have his wishes respected.

Her husband had finally turned her and her children, including his own daughter, out of the house, she said.

Had Only 2 Cents Left.

Louis Newman told about the business troubles into which his wife plunged him. He had a good business and was prosperous when he got married, but his wife persuaded him to open stores at different places and move frequently, and by and by he found himself with only 2 cents left. He told Judge Taylor that his wife, Bessie, had gone to Kansas City. Before she went she filed an answer to his divorce suit, in which she alleged that he beat her with a rocking chair. He denied that indignantly, saying he was too much of a gentleman to do anything like that. The case was taken under advisement.

Mrs. Louise Carlone Poole told Judge Taylor that in the four months that she lived with Warren B. Poole he gave her only $2. She said that when she wanted to talk to him he would walk away from her.

Judge Taylor was not entirely satisfied and he continued the case to the next default day, directing that a subpena be issued for Warren.

Dr. William A. Smith said that his wife, Elizabeth J. Smith, left him one evening to go and see her mother, and the next day she came back, accompanied by her mother, and moved her things away. He said she objected to the locality on North Nineteenth street, where he had to live because his practice was there. He told Judge Taylor his mother-in-law had said she had broken up one home and she would break up another, which brought out the fact that Mrs. Smith had been married and divorced before. This case was taken under advisement.

Mrs. Gertrude Sartin said Philip Sartin had only given her $2 during the two months that she lived with him. She was only 16 when she married him during the World's Fair. She said her husband was drunk half the time and her brother had to pay the bills.

Charles E. Griswold of 343 Windsor place, a cashier, was divorced from Mrs. Margaret Griswold, who has been a stenographer in Chicago since they separated in 1900. It came out that the only child of the couple, a daughter, had died since the suit was filed. The presence of Mrs. Griswold's brother, D. S. Griffiths of Springfield, armed with power of attorney, suggested to Judge Taylor that there might be collusion, and he questioned Mr. Griswold closely. The decree was granted with some reluctance.

SENATOR WOULD "WELCH" ON BIG GAMBLING DEBT

GILDED YOUTHS SQUIRM

Unnamed "Tipsy Youngster," Among Others, Owed "the House" $300,000.

JEROME'S GREAT RAID

Invaded Notorious Resort Eleven Months After Gambling Had Ceased.

NEW YORK, May 29.—A United States Senator who wanted to "welch" on a gaming debt of $60,000 owing to "Dick" Canfield, loomed large in the suit which Canfield's former attorney, John Delahunty, is trying before Justice Newburger to recover $50,500 for legal fees from "Dick."

By the grace of Canfield and an agreement between his counsel and that of Delahunty, the statesman was permitted to pass unnamed. It was not even brought out whether the would-be "welcher" is still alive. He was said to belong to the West.

As soon as District Attorney Jerome struck the trail of Canfield, about two years ago, alarm filled the breast of this unsportsmanlike Senator, who remembered that "Dick" had in his strong box a note of hand for $60,000. Canfield was in London and the Senator's proposition to settle was made through a prominent politician to Delahunty. The politician told the attorney that the Senator was willing to pay $20,000 for his note, but when Canfield received this offer his answer by cable was swift and to the point.

"No!" was his declaration to Delahunty. "The Senator must settle in full, and without the intervention of a third party."

It is a comedy, this suit, which has set young sprigs of fashion and wealth a-trembling lest their losses in Canfield's place shall become public. The action is swift, yet moving with a rare and subtle humor.

Jerome's Mighty Raid.

While Jerome was watching Canfield's haunt near Delmonico's, where there had not been a card turned nor ball rolled for 11 months previous to the raid the District Attorney finally made on Dec. 1, 1905, to the accompaniment of dozens of reporters, photographers and many onlookers, "Dick" was arranging to open at 8 West Forty-seventh street a palace for gaming, such as the world had never known. A few days after the raid the purchase of this Forty-seventh street property was completed by Delahunty.

In his dealings with the young gentlemen whose paper he accepted, Canfield assumed that their notes were to him quite as binding as if made to their bankers. His profession of gambler, he informed them, was quite as respectable as that of the banker or broker in Wall street. Still "the tipsy youngster," whose notes for $300,000 he held, got out of his clutches for $130,000, and incidentally became one of the causes for the present action.

Counsel for both sides make no bones of who this "tipsy youngster" is who owed Canfield $300,000. He is the scion of a great railroad family, but the lawyers asked to have it announced positively that "Mr. W——," who was referred to during the testimony, was not the same person.

Expected Something Unusual.

While Delahunty did not say so in so many words, he let it be understood that on the night of the famous raid "Dick" Canfield and himself were expecting something unusual to happen at 5 East Forty-fourth street.

Delahunty said that he got to the house about 9 o'clock, and from that time on to about 11:20 he and Canfield, "Dave" Bucklin, manager of the house, and Mr. Coe, a friend of Canfield, sat talking. The silence was interrupted by the crashing in of a window and a man, holding two pistols which he pointed at Canfield, who calmly demanded: "Why in the devil did not you come in the front door? There was no occasion for this."

"There really was no occasion for such an entrance," explained Delahunty, "for I know that all evening the outer front door had been open, and within three feet of the inner one a man sat, who would have opened the house to anybody who rang the bell."

A few minutes after the entrance of the man with the pistols, Jerome appeared among them and for nearly an hour haggled with Canfield and Bucklin to plead guilty as common gamblers, promising that if they did so he would see that they got off with a light fine.

In the course of his testimony the lawyer swore that Canfield's income had been $500,000 a year from his gambling house and that he is now worth $3,000,000.

Must Move Building Back.

The City Counselor has decided that a building permit for the alteration of the brick building at 620 Olive street shall not be granted until two columns which support the front part of the second story are removed or altered. The columns are of iron, 12 inches square. They have been standing 35 years and have been projecting all that time 4 inches over the building line. In applying for a permit for repairing the building William H. Pettus, trustee, contended that 10 years' peaceable possession of the strip of territory has given a clear title.

The British loss was one man killed and three wounded.

TAXATION INEQUITIES.

The news from Jefferson City that the State Board of Equalization is making efforts to ascertain the actual value of the railroad property in the State, for the purpose of assessing the property, is gratifying. It ought not to be difficult to obtain full information on this point—information at least as to the value placed upon it by the railroads for their own purposes, and as to the market value, placed upon it by the purchasing public. Certainly the board can learn precisely what is the value of public service corporations in St. Louis and other cities, by taking the market value of their securities.

But when the board has discovered the value of railroads and street railways and other public service corporations, there is yet the vital point to determine, namely, what valuation shall be put upon them for taxing purposes. The law provides that the board shall tax not only the tangible property, but the franchise values of these corporations. The franchise tax law passed under Gov. Dockery's administration provides the method by which the franchises shall be assessed. It directs the board to "fix and determine the total value for taxable purposes of the entire property of such corporation (railroad, street railroad, bridge, telegraph and telephone companies), tangible and intangible, in the State, and shall then assess the tangible property and deduct the amount of such assessment from the total valuation and enter the remainder upon the assessment list in the assessor's book under the head of "other property." The law provides for the assessment of the cash value; the cash value may be determined by the market value of the securities.

Heretofore the value for purposes of taxation of these corporations has not exceeded one-third of the total value, although real property in St. Louis is taxed on the basis of two-thirds. This is the second year in which the Republicans have controlled the board, and last year the excuse was made that there was so much on hand on account of the session of the Legislature, that a thorough revision of the assessment list could not be made. This year the Republican majority, with Gov. Folk assisting, is subjected to a fair test of its intentions with regard to the equalization of taxation.

In the city of St. Louis, where the property of owners of homes and other real property is taxed on a valuation of two-thirds, the assessment of franchise corporations has been based on a ridiculously low valuation.

The Terminal Railroad Co., which is assessed at $3,070,148, has issued stock to the amount of $2,882,000, with a total authorization of $50,000,000. The company's bonds amount to $50,000,000. Its net earnings in 1904 were $2,095,746, or two-thirds of its assessment.

The United Railways Co. was assessed at $17,641,399. The total amount of its bonds is $51,980,000, worth par. Its stock, common and preferred, amounts to $45,000,000, of which $44,897,000 has been issued. The preferred stock is quoted at about $88, the common stock at about $60, an increase of $40 within a year. Its market value, according to the price of its securities, is about $84,000,000. In other words, it is assessed at about one-fifth its market value. Yet fully two-thirds of this value is pure franchise value, which represents not a dollar of investment, but plunder from the people of St. Louis.

The St. Louis & Suburban is assessed at $2,594,043.60. The stock of this company is $7,500,000, of which there has been issued $4,000,000. Its bonds amount to $7,500,000. Its assessment is about one-fourth of its value, most of which represents franbut plunder filched from the people of St. Louis.

The United Railways Co. is now controlled by the North American Co., a monopoly of monopolies, organized in New Jersey to absorb public service corporations. Among its assets are millions of dollars of franchise values in street railways, gas and electric light companies, which the people of St. Louis are making good.

It is outrageous that these public service corporations, holding franchises obtained for a song, and with capitalization which represents on the basis of franchise values millions of dollars worth of water, should be assessed for about one-fifth of their cash values, when the owners of homes and other real estate in the city of St. Louis are assessed on a valuation of two-thirds. If such inequities as these are not corrected by Gov. Folk and his Republican associates on the Board of Equalization, of what value is reform to the people? Why should Republican officials be substituted for Democratic officials, if both refuse to do justice?

The abolition of the pass would reach the unprincipled pass lender. It would improve the morals of both railroads and passengers. Let the pass pass.

PERSONS PREDISPOSED TO INSANITY

"These have been Bryanism," says the learned man, "and free silver, municipal ownership, socialism and other insane doctrines and many persons of weak minds have been so confused by the clashing of opinions that they have become insane."

Dr. Pritchard says he "does not mean that there are not sane Free Silverites and sane believers in municipal ownership and sane Socialists." But he does think that persons predisposed to insanity have been driven mad by these doctrines.

Granting, for the sake of peace and quiet, that these are insane doctrines, the question arises, how is a person predisposed to insanity to know whether a new political movement is crazy? If he knows, of course he will not fool with it.

But suppose a sane Municipal Ownership man (he admits there are such), suppose such a man gets on the jury. There would be a mistrial and the person disposed to insanity would be in a worse fix than before. To the insanity of the doctrine itself is added the confusion and doubt arising out of a hung jury.

There seems to be no escape. We must take our chances with the old habit of mind. We must assume that the other man's doctrine is insane and shout for our own. We might refer the whole matter to Dr. Pritchard, but he won't live forever.

If the Government is expending so many millions without knowing what it is spent for, how are we to have enough to build the Skeered o' Nothin'?

REBATES IN ST. LOUIS.

The revelation that the mercantile house of Mr. Hugh McKittrick, a member of the Municipal Terminal Commission, received rebates from the railroads does not cover all the interests of St Louisans in the evidence brought out by the recent rebate conspiracy cases.

The testimony concerning the wholesale house in St. Louis which happened to have employed the convicted freight broker suggests the larger question as to the extent of the rebate system in St. Louis and its connection with bridge tolls.

Every campaign for the abolition of the bridge arbitrary has met with the surreptitious but powerful opposition of influential business men. The cause of the support of monopoly charges so burdensome to the general public by shippers whose interests ought, unless they are secretly favored, to lead them to attack the monopoly, has been suspected; there have been indications of understandings and special arrangements, but the Kansas City testimony was the first clear exposition of the character of the alliance between the railroads and the big shippers and of its secret disreputable methods.

Possibly the suit of the Federal Government against the bridge and terminal monopoly will disclose the precise relations between the combine and its business supporters, but if not there is ample ground to proceed otherwise under the anti-rebate law. Not only is the giving of rebates an offense under the anti-rebate law, but Judge McPherson clearly intimated that the shippers who receive them may be prosecuted for crimes against the United States.

Should the Pennsy pass into the hands of Agent of Providence Baer, the country will doubtless want to be congratulated.

HIS HIGHEST SERVICE.

These were distinguished enough to be commemorated in bronze, but as a St. Louis business man he did the city and the country higher service still.

He "made money rapidly" in building up the city during the period out of which its present greatness developed. When he had done this work as a business man, he went on working, not to accumulate more money, but to make the city a better place for all its people to live in.

He did not preach that it was a "crime to die rich" and then put another issue of monopoly bonds and preferred stock on the market. He said little, but when he died it was found he had spent gradually for the city, in one way or another, nearly all the money he had made rapidly in business.

The rich man who surprises his community by dying poor in this way leaves no taint either on his money or his memory. He has done his highest service last by leaving his example to the future.

A LAST CHANCE FOR JUSTICE.

If the prosecution vindicates law against delay and technicality in the new proceedings against Robert M. Snyder, it will vindicate itself also against a general belief that many who had most reason to fear the Circuit Attorney's office have little or no fear of it since the promotion of Joseph W. Folk to the Governorship.

This conclusion may be wrong from every standpoint except that of results. On results as they are illustrated by the record up to the present, the sacrifices made to the demand for enforcement of law against municipal frauds are of the usual kind. That is, the men actually given up to the law are those who in all such cases are intended from the beginning for scapegoats by their principals.

The principals have escaped. Not one of the men of intelligence, of means, of standing in the community, who used means, intelligence and standing to promote the ends of a system of plundering at wholesale, has yet been punished. If the Circuit Attorney's office is to change this, it must do so now. It is dealing with its last chance.

Putting money in beds and stoves and kindling fires with kerosene will probably still be making newspaper items in the next new century.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

DISFIGURING THE EXPOSITION BUILDING.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I desire to call the attention of the Signs and Billboards Committee of the Civic League to the unsightly boards surrounding the old Exposition Building at Olive, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. The billboards and flaring posters thereon are not only eyesores, but they are dangerous, inasmuch as they invite a conflagration that would destroy the building and probably much adjacent property. Besides, the lot is city property, and is sufficiently disfigured by the dilapidated appearance of the old building, without the disreputable-looking billboards flanking it. If the city authorities are not sufficiently alive to their duties to abate this nuisance, the Civic League, through its Billboards Committee, should prod them sharply. CITIZEN.

WANTS STRAWBERRY PIE.

Gi' me some strawberry pie! Fresh strawberry pie, made out of fresh strawberries. One can call in all the luncheries, hasheries, restaurants, cafes and any other kind of eatery around the town for strawberry pie and get handed out stuff made of jelly, sickening and trashy, and some dismally preserved strawberries of one or two seasons past. Why can't pie lovers get a square deal? The shortcake is mostly a misdemeanor. Whoever sets out fresh strawberry pie is going to do business. I suppose the pie foundries are to blame; they buy that old truck by the keg. But, anyhow, can't you please gi' me some fresh strawberry pie?

I thought I'd stay a day or so, but I lit out for home

You wouldn't know the dear old place; they've fixed it up for folks
That come out from the city, and they're calling it The Oaks;
You never saw so much to-do, such industry and pother—

And piled me in with all the rest, No difference between
Me and all the rest of them; and when we paid the toll

We went into the dear old house, and Mother met me there
And Sister Jane came in and said: "You're balder than before;

And when we got outside again, came Father, saying: "Gents,

I found the dear old room again, and on the dear old bed
I laid me down and slept me, Bill, with boy-dreams in my head;
And in the watches of the night came Father with immense

I started for the city, Bill, while yet the day was not,
And all the way I hit her up and traveled on a trot;
Upon the hill I stopped to look me back just once again,

STORIES TOLD IN WASHINGTON

To the Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Notwithstanding the flurry about the packing houses and a few other questions of national importance, the rate bill is always a topic of conversation here.

They were talking about it in the lobby of the House. "Well," said Representative Fred Landis, "I guess the President got about what he wanted."

"Sure," replied Representative Garner. "He got what he wanted the way the girl did who was traveling in Mexico. She could speak no Spanish and she wanted some milk. She could not make the waiter understand, so she drew a picture of a cow on a piece of paper. The waiter understood then. He brought her a ticket for a bull fight."

Senator Spooner has stopped smoking. He was mourning his sad fate in the Republican cloak room when Demosthenes Dolliver, thinking to be sympathetic, said: "Well, I guess it is pretty well admitted that the use of tobacco tends to shorten a man's days."

"That's right," Senator Spooner replied. "I find that my days without it are about sixty hours."

"What are they doing?" asked a visitor to the United States Supreme Court.

"They are handing down a decision declaring that those Chattanooga lynchers are in contempt of court unless they show otherwise by October," said an ancient doorkeeper.

Senators Tillman, Elkins and Cullom, the Senate conferes on the rate bill, had a meeting to discuss procedure and all that.

"I suggest," said Tillman, "that a disinterested bystander be appointed to search us for guns."

"Odd drink for a day like this," commented the bartender.

"I know it," the man replied, "but I intend to drink it just to show my contempt for the weather."

An Editor's Reply.

"Why didn't you retaliate when that fellow struck you?"

"I didn't know him, and it is our rule not to pay any attention to anonymous contributions."

CLEVER THINGS I NEVER SAID

Written for the Post-Dispatch

By Lowe R. Case.

My friend, T. Roosevelt, Esq., champion lion catcher of the universe, was having a merry anti-race suicide chat with me.

"One family of my acquaintance," he chortled with a toothsome smile, "contains no less than 11 beautiful daughters. Just think of that! And last week one of them married. Guess who was the happy man?"

"The life of an Arctic explorer is hard!" he sighed. "We spend months of awful peril and privation, and when we return unsuccessful, how can we account to an expectant public for our unavoidable failure?"

My thrifty and hard-working old friend, J. Pierpont Morgan, sat in the next chair to mine in the Owl Lunch Wagon yesterday.

"Congratulate me, Lowe," he chortled, "I've had a raise, and now I feel I can afford to keep a cook. My only worry is how to make her stay in evenings and get up early enough in the mornings."

"Dead easy," I reparteed. "Move to some neighborhood that's on the beat of a handsome policeman and an attractive milkman."

John D. Jr. had just discovered that there were such wicked things as mergers in the world, and had run at once to me to report the horrid news.

"Now, I wonder," he mused sadly, "if by any chance papa's methods of annexing all the oil in sight could be called a merger?"

Nor Indians With Indian Pudding.

From Success Magazine.

Simeon Ford tells of a woman in a Chicago hotel who was known as the most inveterate "kicker" the hostelry had ever known.

One evening at dessert, the lady who was always complaining asked the waiter why the dish served her was called "ice-cream pudding."

"If you don't like it, ma'am, I'll bring you something else," suggested the polite negro.

"Oh, it's very nice," responded the lady. "What I object to is that it should be called ice-cream pudding. It's wrongly named. There should be ice cream served with it."

"Yes, ma'am," replied the waiter, "but that's jest our name for it. Lots o' dishes that way. Dey don't bring you a cottage with a cottage pudding, you know."

COL. TODHUNTER

The Kentucky-Bred Thurs. T. Has to Take a Bracer Upon Hearing That a Sunday Lid Has Been Clapped Upon Louisville.

Written for the Post-Dispatch

By Ripley D. Saunders.

"WHEN I saw in the papers yesterday, suh," said Col. Thurs. T. Todhunter solemnly, "that the Sunday lid had been clapped down good and tight in Louisville, Ky., the day before, I couldn't believe my eyes—and when a second reading convinced me that the news must be true, those same eyes shed scalding tears over the tragedy, suh.

"I ask you, suh, in all earnestness, if you can imagine a sadder human picture than that of the metropolis of Kentucky under the lid? Is there a more dreadful sight possible than is presented by a cityful of Kentuckians unable to obtain a drink, suh? You've read of Tantalus dying of thirst with a drink just beyond his reach, suh, and of Prometheus bound and vultures pecking at his vitals, suh? Well, suh, that was the condition of thousands of Kentucky gentlemen in the chief city of their own State last Sunday, suh—and 'Hark from the tombs, a doleful sound' wasn't a circumstance to the cry that must have gone up from them on that occasion, suh.

"I tell you, suh, wer'e coming to parlous times when happenings such as these are recorded. I shudder to think of their possibilities, suh.

"But the most appalling phase of the situation will be reached when 600,000 Kentucky exiles gather in Louisville for the 'homecoming reunion' next month, suh, and find the Sunday lid covering that city of their soul's desire, suh. I'll be one of the 600,000—and I'm not willing to answer for the consequences when the discovery is made that we can't get a drink on Sunday without violating the law like a sneak thief in the night, suh. And in Kentucky, suh—where good old Bourbon has always flowed like milk and honey in the Promised Land, suh, and where no man ever needed to go dry as long as he had the price, or a friend in the whole wide world, suh, or a bartender willing to take a longshot chance on his credit, suh! It won't seem like Kentucky, suh, it'll seem more like—well, the hot hinges of Hades sounds better, I reckon.

"I'll be eternally condemned if things musn't have gone mighty wrong in the old Bluegrass State since I left there and come to Missouri, suh. Do you suppose that a Sunday lid law would ever have been passed or enforced in Kentucky as long as Col. Thurs. T. Todhunter was a citizen of that great American Commonwealth, suh? No, suh, not unless they bound and gagged me and then slapped their infernal lid down on me like a tombstone, suh—and even then I'd have voiced a Kentucky protest that would have ceased only when the lid rested on my dead body, suh. I'm almost sorry I ever came to Missouri, suh, if this is the result in Kentucky.

"But they'll hear from me at the homecoming reunion, suh. I make no threats—but they'll hear from me—and the men responsible for this outrage can place what construction they please on Col. Thurs. T. Todhunter's plain warning."

NEW RUNES BY THE RHYMERS

Wallace Irwin in Success Magazine.

The Man at the Desk has a patient look
Piled up decimals mountains high
Which seem to sing to his well-ruled brain

Discount, balance, day by day;

The Man at the Desk with the patient look
Has followed the rules of the copy-book—
"Early to bed and early to rise,"
Honest, industrious, sober, chained
To his office cell, he has long remained
Dead of ambition, busy of pen,

Carried forward, close account;
Daybooks, draftbooks, interest, duns—
So the monotonous river runs."

The Man at the Desk with the patient look
Has written his life in the open book,
Has charged up Youth with a small account,
And crossed off Love as a closed account.
Yet bright are the tears in his faded eye

"Debit, credit," the bugles play,
Carried forward, interest, duns—

Chollie.

He was a youth of high degree,
His collar monstrous tall,
And danced at every ball;
He ogled every girl he saw,
His nerve was mostly gall;
He had a bad cold in his head,
And that was all.

A Runaway Star.

One of the greatest enigmas that the astronomers have tried to solve is a star in the northern heavens known as 1830 Groombridge, which means No. 1830 in Groombridge's catalogue. No one has given it any other name, except the colloquial one of the "runaway star." It is near the Great Dipper, but it cannot be seen with the unaided eye. As nearly as the astronomers have been able to determine, this remarkable star is moving through space with a velocity of about 200 miles a second, a speed that surpasses anything hitherto known. Think of its moving 120,000 miles in ten minutes! If the earth moved equally fast, the journey around the sun would be made in about one month, instead of the 12 months now required. Where the star came from, and where it is going, no one knows. It may be visiting our heavens for the first time. Perhaps it may be of interest to note that notwithstanding its tremendous speed, it would require about 185,000 years to complete the circuit of the heavens.

How to Make a Kite.

The principal point in preparing a kite, and the one that shows skill in the maker, is the arrangement of the string and the tail. But, first, about the making of it. A very pretty one may be made like that in the illustration, which is after a Japanese model, by taking the thin strips of bamboo that are found in Japanese fans and arranging them as shown and then covering them with tissue paper.

Several short strings should be tied to the frame, and these should be united by a knot, to which the string of the kite is afterward fastened. The knot must be so placed that when you lift the kite by it, before the tail has been attached, the kite should hang with its sides perfectly even, and the point where the tail is to be attached should fall slightly lower than the top. The proper flying of the kite depends on this knot, for if it is placed too high the kite, in flying, will plunge sideways; if placed too low it will whirl around.

The tail should not be less than 12 times the length of the kite, and it may be even 20 times its length. Folded papers, each about three inches long, may be made into stiff bobs and fastened with strings at intervals of three inches or so for the tail. If you use rags or pieces of cloth tied together the tail will have to be a little shorter, as they are heavier than the paper.—Home Journal.

Indian Territory Minus Indians.

There are estimated to be 400,000 people in Indian Territory, only one-quarter of whom are Indians, says M. G. Cunniff in the June World's Work. As one travels through the territories, this proportion is borne out by one's experience. One might ride through Oklahoma, stopping off at town after town without ever seeing an Indian. In Indian Territory an Indian shack or tepee is occasionally visible from the railroad, with its dwellers loafing about, but you recognize no Indians in the towns, and you do not see Indians loafing about the railroad stations. If you do see one in town, you have to be told that he is an Indian, for he is probably a half-breed or a quarter-breed well-dressed and competent-looking, not distinguishable from the white men with whom he mingles.

"Indian Territory," said a business man in Tulsa, I. T., "is not peopled by Indians. There are fewer than 200,000 Indians owning the land, and there are probably 200,000 white men in the towns and scattered through the territory."

THE WOMAN'S CORNER

A Spaniel for the Duchess.

It is a traditionary etiquette custom in the Marlborough family for each duke to present a Blenheim spaniel to the Duchess when she enters Blenheim Palace for the first time as its mistress. The story from which this custom has its origin is that during the battle of Blenheim a spaniel followed at the heels of the great Duke throughout the day, never leaving him until victory was assured.

My Lady's Gown.

Just pull it in
To meet her chin,
A ballet dress 'twill be.
Then let it down
To reach the ground—
An evening dress you'll see.

Emancipation of Women.

While it is impracticable to consider the law in detail, generalizing it may be said that woman now possesses (1) complete control of her person and of her property, real and personal, (2) freedom to enter into contracts, (3) the right to sue for injuries to her character, person or property, (4) the joint custody of her children, though this is a recent development and it must be admitted that the excepted States far outnumber those where the rule is in force, (5) in four States the right of equal suffrage and in 22 others and two territories a restricted right, applicable only to school affairs.

In some respects, the pendulum has swung far. That it is well-nigh impossible to convict a beautiful woman is known to every criminal lawyer, and susceptible juries are not uninfluenced in civil cases by the piteous glance of soulful eyes, dimmed in tears. Well, let it be so, though we should remember that, in the language of Judge Bleckley, formerly of Georgia's Supreme Court, "in protecting women, courts and juries should be careful to protect men, too, for men are not only useful to general society, but to women especially."—Gerald Chapin in "Women First," in Everybody's Magazine for June.

Turkish Women's Veils.

"The Turkish woman's veil is a lighter, more transparent thing than the American woman's," said a globe trotter. "Through it you can see without difficulty the Turkish woman's brilliant eyes, her white teeth, and her painted mouth. The veil does not conceal, it enhances her beauty.

"In Constantinople, every evening, the women of the harems drive without their husbands. They look charming, in their luxuriant carriages, under their veils of pale gossamer.

"Sometimes veils in Constantinople become so outrageously thin and transparent that the Sultan issues an edict about them. He prescribes a certain thickness for the ladies' veils. He bitterly rebukes the shocking immorality of the veils in vogue—veils that are hardly shadows.

"And the day after the royal proclamation, all the women wear veils of the thickness of blankets. Their charms are completely hidden. It is impossible to tell a pasha's seventh and most beautiful wife from his first and oldest one.

"But the next week the veils are a little thinner. The next week they are a little thinner still. Soon they are the same delicate, gossamer texture as of yore.

"It is impossible for anyone, even for the Sultan of Turkey, an arbitrary monarch, to impose for long on women an unbecoming fashion."

Railroads vs. River.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ST. LOUIS, May 18.—We have seen much in the public prints of late regarding the deep-water project between Chicago and St. Louis and the deepening of the Mississippi River below St. Louis to admit of carrying of heavy tonnage between the Great Lakes and the Gulf of Mexico.

Now, does the Post-Dispatch or the people of the Mississippi Valley think that there is a single chance for either of these projects going through the law-making bodies of this country as long as both bodies are controlled by the railway interests?

Even the United States Engineering Corps, the working end of the bunch, spends a large part of its time fighting the river where it happens to threaten railroad property, while the lands of tax-paying individuals are often left to the mercy of the destroying current, even though this great amount of mud and sand be deposited in the main channel of the river, threatening to close navigation and gradually shutting off the only rate regulator that can be of any value to any part of the country.

In short, under present conditions, the rivers seem to get what is left and they get that little handed to them on "the long spoon." But as long as the railroads own, lease or operate the country, it is going to take more than banquets and hot air to put a tonnage through the ditches, we call rivers, sufficiently large to keep carrying rates within the bounds of reason.

There is no sympathy for the river, even today, when boats are leaving St. Louis with loads of 15 to 20 per cent of their licensed tonnage for points that careless or unthinking shippers are giving double tonnage to railways at double prices for transportation.

In and out of a city like St. Louis, with foreign terminals, the steamboat of today is even a quicker means of transportation than the railroad, so far as freight is concerned. The writer does considerable business between St. Louis and river points, both up and down the river. Nothing goes or comes for me except by river if it be possible to reach by river. I can get goods delivered in St. Louis from points three to four hundred miles away in less time by steamboat than it usually takes to get one carload of stuff from East St. Louis. This does not include the time it is waylaid around railroad junctions coming 300 miles before it reaches East St. Louis, nor does it include the 24 hours lost in notifying consignee by postal card that it is ready for delivery.

One steamboat will regulate freight rates on 5000 miles of railroad, but at the present rate of decrease it will be only a short time before we have not even one steamboat, and will then have to pay the railways what it cost them to rid the rivers of their competition.

When the shipper gives his freight to the steamboat and encourages navigation the boats will increase, and with the increase of importance of the rivers will come the increase of recognition from the law-makers, who are bound, in self-protection to recognize greatness, even in a steamboat.

Encourage them and we shall soon see more interest in the river among the people who make the world move, and will be able to force Congress to do its duty and save ourselves the humiliation of begging for what is already ours. R. H. C.

Some Ideas of His Own.

It was Dick's turn to read his composition in school. He arose, walked up in front of his teacher's desk and after making his bow unrolled a sheet of foolscap and began:

Rescued Forests.

John F. Lacey in May Outing.

Fortunately many millions of acres of wooded lands are still held by the national Government, and about 85,000,000 acres of these lands have been set apart in eighty-three permanent national forest reserves. The primary purpose of these reservations is to conserve the streams and provide means of irrigation and also, in some degree, to influence the rainfall. They are well scattered in the far West, and are generally upon land which is of little value for agricultural uses.

They are reserved for the use of man and not reserved from his use. The ripened trees will be cut as they may be needed. There has been much local opposition to many of these reservations, but time and observation have greatly changed the local sentiment. The experimental stage has passed and they can therefore be accepted as an established fact, and the question naturally arises as to what extent they may be utilized for the preservation of the remains of our birds, fish and game and be used as sources of propagation and supply. At least a portion of these lands should be so used. The writer of this article has for many years endeavored to secure legislation to this end. Wyoming has shown her sympathy with the movement by declaring a permanently closed season in that part of the forest reserves adjacent to the Yellowstone National Park.

Chauffeurs of Long Ago.

There were chauffeurs long before automobiles. History tells us that about the year 1735 men strangely accoutered, their faces covered with soot and their eyes carefully disguised, entered by night farms and lonely habitations and committed all sorts of depredations. They garroted their victims, dragged them before a great fire, where they burned the soles of their feet and demanded information as to the whereabouts of their money and jewels. Hence they were called "chauffeurs," a name which frightened so much our good grandmothers.

Direct local treatment by breathing Hyomei through the pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, is absolutely necessary to kill the catarrhal germs and prevent their growth and formation.

The soothing air of Hyomei heals the smarting and raw membrane of the air passages in the nose, throat and lungs, kills off the catarrhal germs and rids the system of the last traces of catarrh.

The complete Hyomei outfit consists of a hard rubber inhaler which can be carried in the purse or vest-pocket, a medicine dropper, and a bottle of Hyomei, and costs only one dollar, while extra bottles can be obtained for 50 cents.

While the American millionaire semi-occasionally leaves his native land and becomes an English citizen, yet the course just taken by Squire Tyrrel Rawdon of Rawdon Hall, Yorkshire, is so unusual a contradiction to the regular run of such cases as to arouse a thrill of interest throughout the United States.

Rawdon, it will be remembered, came penniless to this country some years ago, went West, and, after a hard fight for luck, became owner of a rich silver mine. He married beautiful Ethel Rawdon, daughter of Judge Rawdon, of New York, a distant cousin, and together they returned to Rawdon Hall, where they revived all the old splendors of that famous country seat.

Now, however, comes the news that Rawdon has disposed of his $150,000 estate in England and is coming back, with his wife, to America, to settle down in New York for life. The reason he advances is that, after the free life of America, England is too small for him, and that he can feel truly at ease nowhere outside Uncle Sam's territory.

New York friends, however, hint at a more serious and dramatic cause for the exodus. The reason these friends assign is connected with the mysterious Stanhope case, which involved the foremost members of Gotham's Smart Set.

This case is set forth in graphic detail in "The Man Between," Amelia E. Barr's masterpiece, which is destined to shake the clerical and fashionable world to its foundations.

YOUTH INJURED IN RACE CLASH

Quincy Sever, Struck by Negro's Missile, Not Expected to Recover.

On the hill that rises north from the north side of the railroad tracks in Mill Creek Valley, just west of Jefferson avenue, a smal army of white boys has dug up the hatchet of peace because one of their comrades, Quincy Sever, whom they almost worship as their leader, is seriously injured as a result of a clash with the young negroes in the neighborhood.

At the home of young Sever, 2851 Scott avenue, a Post-Dispatch reporter was told Tuesday morning by the father of the injured boy, E. H. Sever, a Missouri Pacific fireman, that the chances for the recovery of his son were small. He is suffering from concussion of the brain, an iron railroad bolt hurled by a young negro having struck him in the back of the head. The boy is 16 years old.

The battle occurred early Sunday afternoon. Young Sever and a dozen of his followers had gone to the old Compton Park at Compton avenue and the railroad tracks, hoping to have a game of baseball with another team.

Negroes' Hasty Conference.

On Garrison avenue a crowd of young negroes was idling in the street. When the white boys were seen a hasty conference of several of the larger negroes was held, and soon the details of an attack were arranged.

Close to the corner house on the west side of Garrison avenue the negroes huddled out of sight of the approaching white boys. When the unsuspecting boys had nearly reached Garrison, one of the negroes gave the signal and the whole crowd—20 in all—rushed around the corner, shouting and yelling.

There were several small boys in the crowd with Sever. These gathered around their young leader in alarm, waiting for his advice. Sever stood still, and, though his face paled, he looked unflinchingly at the negroes, who had halted several feet away and begun hurling epithets at the smaller number of whites.

"Youse can't come down this heah street, you fool white trash, you," yelled one of the negroes, who had several stones in his hands. "Go back around the other way, or we'll git you."

One of the younger boys with Sever said in a frightened whisper: "Let's run for it, Quincy; they're two to our one."

"No," said the young leader firmly to his comrade. Then he yelled at the enemies: "Come on and make us go back. We're not afraid of you."

Then several things happened very quickly. The negroes spread out until they formed a semi-circle around the whites. One of them threw a stone and a minute later Sever and his followers were under a fire that came from three sides at once.

Realized His Danger.

Sever was "fighting mad." He picked up a stone, but before he let it go his discretion returned to him, and, realizing the danger he and his companions were in, he made up his mind quickly with the decision of a born leader.

"We will have to run for it, I guess," he said. At his word the younger boys started off on a mad gallop up Atlantic street.

But Sever turned to give some show of a fight before he left the ground. He drew back his arm to throw his missile. But, through the air from one of the negroes who had got behind him to cut off his retreat, came an iron railroad bolt. Young Sever went to the ground with an ugly wound in the back of his head.

His comrades thought at first he was running with them. But John Sweeney of 2629 Scott avenue and Clayton Bradley of 2820 Franklin avenue, both 15 years old, turned, and, seeing their fallen leader, ran down the hill to the rescue.

Young Bradley leaned over his wounded comrade and tried to get some words from him. But Sever was unconscious and Bradley at first thought he was dead. Bradley, with Sweeney picked up handfuls of rocks and hurled them at the aggressors.

Then the two boys picked up their fallen leader. Sever was talking incoherently. "I believe they got me," he repeated several times. Sever was carried home.

Fighter's Fine Stayed.

John J. Gund of 4414 South Fifteenth street was fined $10 in the City Hall Police Court Tuesday for breaking the jaw of John Hertel of 5035 Alabama avenue. The fine was stayed. The trouble occurred at a garden at Fifteenth and Osceola streets April 29 and is said to have resulted from an attempt on the part of Gund to keep Hertel out of the garden.

WALL STREET MARKET VERY PROFESSIONAL

NEW YORK, May 29.—The stock market opened on the upturn today under an improved demand from both the long and short account. The coalers were again strong, with Reading still the feature, selling up to 142.

Reports from the growing wheat sections are more encouraging and unless an unfavorable change in the weather again takes place, this phase of the situation should shortly lose some of its importance. The practical settlement of the labor difficulties in the bituminous coal fields should also influence sentiment favorably, as this removes the last chance of extended labor trouble. London sent a higher range on Americans before the local opening.

The Early Market.

The fortnightly settlement begins in London today and it will be concluded tomorrow, which will be a holiday here, of course. The London Stock Exchange will also be closed on next Saturday and next Monday. It is rumored this morning that Secretary Shaw will discontinue the special deposit of Government funds for the purpose of facilitating gold imports. Should this be done it is highly probable that the import of gold will be suspended at once. The ordinance authorizing the issue of $75,000,000 of Mueller certificates passed the Chicago City Council last night, but it is too early to figure its effect on the money market. Call rates remain easy and as long as an extensive bull campaign is not fostered, it is thought in banking circles that the present rate will be maintained. General news is unimportant and commission houses are still advising a very conservative position on the market. The demand in the loan crowd is light and the indications are that the recent heavy short interest has been pretty well eliminated in the rise of the past few days. Railroad earnings continue excellent, and 37 roads for the third week of May show the big gross increase of 13.63 per cent over the returns for the same period one year ago. The Reading statement for April, however, was very poor, the company showing a decrease in its net returns of $1,404,423. Reports from the steel and iron trade continue favorable, and the Tennessee Coal and Iron Co. announces the booking of orders for steel rails for 1907 delivery of 200,000 tons. The market was quiet and reactionary at the noon period, with money loaning on call at 4 to 4½ per cent.

The Closing.

Summer dullness prevailed on the exchange after the noon hour and for long periods at a time no transfers of any kind were recorded. Prices drifted through a very narrow range, but on the whole displayed a firm tendency. Even the speculation in Reading died out, and no effort was made to carry the advance further. Erie received fairly good support at all times on its excellent quarterly statement ending March 31. The gross earnings for the period showed an increase of $2,166,081. Operating expenses increased $569,886 and net earnings increased $1,596,195. The statement was in conspicuous contrast with that of the Reading company. There was little life to the last hour's trading and the closing was featureless, with the general market showing only minor changes.

Local Money.

Indorsed bills, receivable, 4 to 6 months, 5¼ to 5½ per cent; high-grade single-name paper, 4 to 6 months, 5¼@5½ per cent; other names, not so well known, 5½ per cent; call money on good security, 5@5½ per cent. Demand for money good. Banks report business active.

Mercantile Dividend.

The Board of Directors of the Mercantile Trust Co. yesterday authorized the payment of the regular monthly dividend of 1 per cent on the company's stock and an extra dividend of $4 per share. The dividend is payable to stockholders of record today. The Christmas dividend of $4 per share was also ordered to be reserved out of the undivided profits.

LIVESTOCK.

CATTLE—Receipts, 4000. Heifer receipts liberal today, were about evenly divided between the native and Southern divisions and included quite a number of fair to good kind. Natives sold steady, even strong, on the best, but the Southern trade was slow at steady values.

GRAIN MARKET IS IRREGULAR

CORN IS STRONGER

On Big Buying in Chicago and Rapidly Decreasing Stocks.

The wheat market developed a weaker tendency today on improved weather reports and more liberal offerings by the professional element. Market sentiment is less bullish than in some time past and the foreign reports, especially on the crop outlook, were more encouraging.

News generally was unimportant and the trade is inclined to the belief that with the end of the May deal, which is now in sight, some pressure against prices from the bears may develop. Business in all markets shows a falling off. The weekly Government report was construed as bearish.

Foreign markets continue to reflect the indifference of the speculative element to our advance and Liverpool prices were unchanged on wheat and ¼d higher on corn. Other outside markets showed an irregular range of prices. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 265 cars in, against 219 last week and 540 two years ago. Last year was a holiday. Minneapolis stocks continue to decrease rapidly.

Bradstreet's visible figures showed: Wheat, east of Rockies, decrease, 3,273,000 bu; Europe and afloat, increase 200,000 bu; total, decrease, 3,073,000 bu; corn, increase, 915,000 bu; oats, decrease, 1,338,000 bu. Wheat, decrease, last week, 2,707,000 bu; last year, decrease, 5,605,000 bu. Corn, last week, decrease, 565,000 bu; last year, increase, 121,000 bu. Oats, last week, decrease, 1,607,000 bu; last year, increase, 1,633,000 bu.

The weekly foreign crop summary says: United Kingdom—Crop conditions improving. France—The outlook for crops satisfactory. Germany—Beneficial rains have fallen which have been favorable for crops.

Austria-Hungary—There are some complaints of rust, but satisfactory harvest expected if favorable weather, which is now experienced, continues.

Spain-Portugal—Crop conditions excellent.

North Africa—Outlook for crops fair.

Clearances of wheat and flour were 190,000 bu.

The corn market was very strong in the face of the weakness in wheat and offerings were light at all times. Reports of big speculative buying in Chicago were the main influence in the buying, while good cash demands and lighter country offerings increased the bull pressure.

Crop reports are not flattering and should they continue adverse receipts are expected to fall off rapidly. The light stocks are also indicative of trouble for the short interest in covering outstanding contracts. Clearances were 723 bu.

The oats market was very strong on the strength in corn and very light offerings. Clearances were 2000 bu.

THIELMAN FEELS HE IS ILL USED

Claims That He Is Not Getting a Square Deal From His Club.

John Thielman, the Cardinal pitcher who was informed by Manager McCloskey Monday night that he would not be taken East with the team, and would be left at home until sent for, feels that the St. Louis National League Club is trying to cover him up in order to send him to some minor league club.

When Manager McCloskey was asked why Thielman was not going to accompany the club East he said that Thielman was not in condition, and would be left at home until he worked himself into better shape.

Thielman claims that he is in good condition, and that he has been ready to go into the box for some time, and that he has asked to pitch, but has never been given the chance.

"It's just a case of cover up," said Thielman after Monday's game. "I know the club has been trying to get rid of me for some time, and that I was offered to Jimmy Burke for his Kansas City club. I don't want to go into a minor league, for I know I can make good in either of the big ones. Patsy Donovan is a friend of mine, and I believe arrangements could be made with him for my release.

"McCloskey may tell you that I am to be left at home because I am not in condition. That is not doing me justice. I am in condition, and told him that I expected to go East with the boys and pitch my share of the games.

"I have pitched in but two games this season, and could not do my best on account of a sore arm, but I am all right now. I would like to stay in St. Louis, and cannot understand why I am not given a chance to make good. I know McCloskey has a big staff of pitchers, but I should be given a trial with the rest."

"He and I are friends, and although I was not at all satisfied with my contract last year, that matter has been adjusted and I am ready and anxious to work and am in condition to give a good account of myself. I ought to be taken East with the team."

Thielman was the Cardinals' leading pitcher last year. He pitched 32 games, averaging a percentage of victories of .484. His best work was done during the first part of the National's season and for a time he was regarded as the greatest find of the year. Toward the close of the 1905 campaign, however, he lost a great deal of his effectiveness.

Thielman was a member of the Butte (Mont.) Club in 1903, when McCloskey was managing that organization, and pitcher and manager are said to have had some trouble that led to McCloskey hitting Thielman with his fist.

Thielman, who is of a reticent nature, is said to have not forgotten or forgiven this, and for this reason those cognizant of the incident have wondered just how loyally he would get along with McCloskey.

His claim that he is in fine shape and McCloskey's unwillingness to send him to the rubber, together with the fact that waivers have been asked for his release, indicate that Thielman will probably be wearing the uniform of some other club before the Cardinals return home from their first invasion of the East.

Garnsey of Yale Gets His.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 29.—Horace Betts Garnsey, president of the senior class of the Yale Medical School, is the first undergraduate to go into prize fight publicity. In an effort to get the title of State champion he tackled Jeff Doherty, who has been the Connecticut lightweight champion for two years, last night in Bridgeport, and lasted less than one round.

Garnsey sailed in like a whirlwind, but he became winded in less than a minute. Doherty crossed lefts and rights over his jaw till the Yale class president reeled on the ropes. He protected himself and refused to quit, but Doherty rained blows on his face till Referee Fitzgerald stopped the fight.

Garnsey was caught speculating in football tickets for the Yale-Harvard football game last fall, but refused to resign as class president. He threatened injunction proceedings if the faculty threw him out, and was finally let alone. He has been in several bouts, but never before went out for the title of State champion.

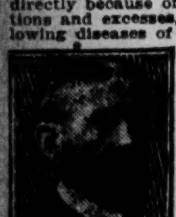

OUR WATCHES are all standard makes and none are guaranteed for less than 20 years. Prices, $10.00 upward. We will be glad to sell you on credit and let you name your own terms.

The Sportsman's Niche, by Sheridan.

Knowledge is proud that he has learn'd so much;
Wisdom is humble that he knows no more.
—Cowper.

While the sporting editor of the Post-Dispatch was watching the baseball game between the Cardinals and Giants last Saturday he was much amused by a conversation which took place between two young men in his immediate rear.

They were discussing players and their abilities. One said, "Did you read what the Post-Dispatch said about McBride being brilliant in common play and weak in pinches and Wallace doing his best work when absolute necessity demanded it?" said one.

"Yes," replied the other. "I cannot always agree with the judgment of that sporting editor. He is prejudiced and thinks that he alone knows anything about baseball. He thinks that Smoot and Himes are not good players. I think they are. He gets a prejudice against a man and holds it. He is a knocker."

The sporting editor and friend enjoyed this hugely. They were very nice young fellows and doubtless, first-class men in their line of business which, very plainly had nothing to do with baseball.

Things went along finely to the fateful ninth. Himes hit out two triples and a single. McBride did grand work. The Cardinals led, 3-2, and looked like certain winners.

Then, with two out in the ninth inning Marshall hit to McBride. This was the man he just "had" to get to win. Get but him and the game was over.

Alas, why repeat the doleful story. McBride threw over Beckley's head to the pavilion. Then Bresnahan hit one at the shortstop. It was a base hit, for had he fielded it clearly he could scarce have gotten the batter. But he could have caught Marshall at third and again the game would have been won. As it was the Giants scored two runs and which made the score 4 to 3 in their favor, and won the game.

With two out in the Cardinals' half of the ninth Smoot was on third, Himes at the bat. The critics were jubilant. Had he not made two triples and was not his eye on the ball?

The sporting editor said to his friend, "I'll bet that he stands still and let the third strike be called upon him." And he did.

Moral—Let the shoemaker stick to his last. Doubtless the nice young men know their business. The sporting editor of the Post-Dispatch flatters himself that he knows his. And it is baseball.

The Nelson-Herrera fiasco at Los Angeles on Friday last is another of the shameful double crosses which pugilists and their managers give the supporters of the sport. Unquestionably the game was played to save money to the pockets of the fight promoters. According to the articles of agreement Herrera should have weighed in at 6 p. m. This he refused and failed to do. When he did so the money he posted to guarantee his weight was forfeited to Nelson and should have been instantly given him by the stakeholder. It lay with Nelson to say then if he was willing to meet Herrera at catch weights. If he refused to do so the gates should not have been opened to the spectators. In this case every dollar paid for seats could have been refunded. As it was many spectators threw their coupons away when they were seated and could not recover them. These men are out their money and the promoters are that much in.

It is held that the scales, which were in the office of the fight club, were all right at 3 p. m., but all wrong at 6 p. m., and that Herrera would not go elsewhere to weigh. It would have been an easy matter to secure another and absolutely correct scales from a dealer in a few minutes. This was not done.

There is something back of all this. Nelson cannot be held blameful. It is said that prior to the San Francisco disaster Eddie Graney was to have refereed this match. The idea was that Graney would let Nelson fight as he pleased, give him all the best of it and win his esteem and confidence. Then Graney, who managed Gans, was to fix up a match between the negro and Nelson. The latter was to be led to believe that here, also, he was to have everything his own way and win, whereas the plan was to let Gans cut loose and do what he surely can do if fit, beat Nelson. The earthquake spoiled it all. Unquestionably it ruined the gate, for few San Franciscans had the money to spend on a trip to Los Angeles and concurrent expenses. This made the shortage in the receipts which brought about the postponement and the wrangle over the weight.

Truly man proposes and some one else disposes.

POWELL PITCHES AGAINST BLUES

Red John Will Endeavor to Win From Lajoie's Larrupers Tuesday Afternoon.

CLEVELAND, O., May 29.—Powell is due to pitch the first of the series of four games which the Ravens are to play here this afternoon. The big exboilermaker was very much perturbed because he did not get a chance at the Athletics yesterday at Philadelphia, but rain caused the game to be postponed.

The Athletics have had a wholesome respect for Jack Powell ever since the Browns and Philadelphia were tied for the American League pennant, in September, 1902. Labor Day of that month Powell pitched two games against them, winning one in the morning and the other in the afternoon.

The Blues have won six out of the nine games they have played with the Ravens this season, and McAleer is anxious to even matters up in the present series.

A warm reception awaits both clubs at the park this afternoon, as McAleer is a big favorite, because of his connection with the old Cleveland club. Lajoie and his men will come in for special praise on account of their great work on the Eastern trip.

The Blues annexed two games from New York, two from Washington, four from Boston and three from the Athletics.

M'GANN'S MISTAKE HELPED CARDINALS

The usual ability of the World's Champions to think and to act quickly was not in evidence Monday and the Cardinals won the final game of the series from New York, 5 to 4.

McGann gave the game to the Cardinals by dumb ball playing, which arose in the seventh inning, when, with McBride on third, one man out, and Grady on first, Thompson hit to first base. The first sacker had plenty of time to catch Grady going to second, but McGann touched the first sack, gettong Thompson, and very content with that. With two out, Benett then stepped to the plate and scored Grady with a double to left for wo bases.

The play lost the Giants the game, revived the confidence of the Cardinals and correspondingly depressed the McGrawites.

Thompson, who was on the slab for St. Louis, twirled fair ball, with the exception of the fourth inning, when slovenly work on the part of Smoot and some sequential slugging by the Giants netted them four runs.

Wiltse had nice curves and great speed, but the Cardinals found little difficulty in reaching him. Bennett batted right-handed against the southpaw with effect, and Arndt and Grady swatted him viciously.

The victory enabled the McCloskeyites to split even with the Giants on the series, quite a feat when it is remembered that they were opposing the world's champions.

Barry to Coach Notre Dame.

NOTRE DAME, Ind., May 29.—The athletic board today engaged Thomas Barry, an Eastern man, to act as football coach. Barry played with Brown and made the all-American team in 1902. Last year he coached Bowdoin, and would have gone to Northwestern this year had not that university abolished the game.

Barry is also a star baseball man, having played with Buffalo and Montreal of the Eastern League. He will coach the baseball team and if he proves to be the right man will be made director of athletics, occupying a position like that of Stagg of Chicago. It was announced some time ago that Catlin would coach Notre Dame. He made a proposition to the athletic board which was accepted.

He later decided to cast his lot with Iowa. Barry, who is attending the Harvard Law School, was secured for Notre Dame through Byron V. Kanalley, a former student.

The National Bank of Commerce team overwhelmed the Mississippi Valley team by the score of 34 to 12.

SCHOOLBOY ATHLETES MAKE FINE RECORDS

Performances Achieved by the High and Academy Lads of St. Louis Quite Equal Those of Chicago and New York.

The interscholastic athletic meet which will be held at the Stadium Wednesday afternoon is attracting unusual attention. The event will formally wind up the college athletic season and the competition for the point trophy promises to furnish bitter competition between McKinley, Central and Smith.

School athletics in St. Louis have not always been afforded the support they should and it is hoped that Wednesday will prove an exception to the rule and that spectators, enthusiasm and performances will surpass that of previous years.

A comparison of the records of St. Louis schoolboys with those of the members of the Illinois Interscholastic Athletic Association prove that St. Louis lads are furnishing quite as good exhibitions as the athletes of Chicago.

Eckersall, the famous Chicago football player, holds the interscholastic 100-yard record of 10 seconds for the Illinois association, made in 1903, while a student of the Hyde Park school. Archie Loud of McKinley High School has repeatedly been timed at 10 1-5 seconds for the same distance.

The Chicago record for the 220 was placed by Eckersall in 1903 at 22 seconds. Loud's time is 22 2-5.

Douglass M. Johnson's record of 51 2-5 seconds for the quarter is faster than any time made by a Chicago schoolboy, the best mark being held by Cahill of the Hyde Park school of 52 seconds.

In the half-mile Webster of the Chicago Englewood School in 1901 set a record of 2:04. The best St. Louis time for this event was made by R. W. Rombauer of Smith Academy, who covered the distance in 2:06 4-5.

Webster, who was one of the greatest runners that the Windy City ever produced, also has made better time for the mile than any St. Louis interscholastic. His best was 4:40, as against Fenwick of McKinley's 4:57 2-5.

Otto Springe of McKinley has more than once beaten the mark of Kelly of the Duquoin High School for throwing the shot. Kelly's best put was 46 feet 2 inches. Springe last week at Sparta threw the missile 46 feet 9 inches.

In the running high jump Chicago's best schoolboy record was made—Dougherty of Biggsville, who cleared 5 feet 11 inches. E. Mitchell of Central has jumped within one inch of that height.

In the pole vault Harry Challis has jumped as high as Morris of Englewood, the former clearing 10 feet 6¾ in 1902. Challis has done as well as 10 feet 2 in competition and beaten Morris' mark in trials.

When the lack of encouragement that school athletics have received in St. Louis is taken into consideration the comparative showing of the St. Louisans with the best that Chicago affords is an excellent one.

Wednesday's big meet should see even better work done, for it promises to be the biggest interscholastic event ever held in the city.

College Collations

The preliminary heats in the 100, 220, high and low hurdles for the big interscholastic meet to be held at the Stadium Decoration Day were run off at the Stadium Monday. Archie Loud, as was expected, demonstrated his superiority over the sprinters in his heat by winning the trial in :10 2-5. Other winners in the 100 were Hurley of Western, Eilers of Smith and Dowell of McKinley. The trials in the 100 indicate that Loud's bitterest competition in the event will come from Hurley of Western Military Academy, and that Eilers of Smith will take third place.

Coach Walker has his men in fine fettle, as was evidenced when Lincoln finished in front of Jack Gildehouse in the low hurdles. The McKinley crack has been confident of winning this event and his defeat came as a crushing surprise.

Percy Blackmer finished first in the high hurdles, defeating Harry Murray of Central; Dowell of McKinley, who seems to be a sure winner in the discus throw, won his heat in the high hurdles and Duncan of Central was the other winner. The final between these cracks should result in a splendid contest.

M'GOVERN HOLDS BRITT VERY EVEN

Californian Was Cleverest, but New Yorker Had Steam in His Punches.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Terry McGovern gave Jimmy Britt a fierce fight last night at Madison Square Garden. It was a 10-round affair, and Terry plunged and slugged every inch of it in the old aggressive McGovern manner. He was entirely unlike the Terry who fought Nelson.

Looking at it as a slugging match, Terry had the best of it. He took all the wallops Jimmy sent over and came back greedily for more. His recuperative power was wonderful, and he was fighting as much better and more aggressively at the end of the scrap than in the earlier rounds, although two or three times Britt had him reeling. He drew blood from Britt three times, while he was unmarked himself.

But Britt was faster and much cleverer. He outpointed Terry round after round. Through the first half of the fight he looked like a sure winner. On points Britt could not be given worse than a draw.

Once or twice it looked as if Terry might knock Britt out. When the Californian's punches began to lose their sting Terry merely set his jaw, waded in against them and exchanged blow for blow. He was willing to take anything for the chance to counter. And his punches hurt more than Britt's. In the second round a savage left hook made a big cut over Jimmy's right eye, and at intervals after that the fight became a gory spectacle.

The police took a hand early in the game. All the preliminary scrappers were arrested as they re-entered their dressing rooms. Britt and McGovern were also taken in charge and will be arraigned today with the club officials.

Just before the bout I visited Jimmy Britt in his dressing room. He was worried. Someone had just come in to see him, and had told him that Terry was in very bad shape mentally and that a knockout would do him serious injury—perhaps kill him. Britt answered that if he found Terry in bad shape he would not fight him at all, and that the bout would have to be stopped at once.

Up in Terry's quarters, in the third tier, there was no indication of anything wrong. Terry, ready in good time, had put on a gray sweater and was sitting out on the balcony looking at the first preliminary bout.

Jimmy Britt, as he came to the scratch, looked an ideal fighter. He was lean and trim as a race horse and his muscles played easily under a skin as smooth as satin.

Terry was fatter. He looked much bigger than in his last fight. He had developed a lot of muscles about the arms and shoulders. But he was big-waisted, too. His legs were thick and muscular. It did not seem possible that he could have all of his old-time speed and punishing power.

Marathon Race at Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Chairman Everett C. Brown of the Championship Committee of the A. A. U., announced today that a Marathon race will be held in connection with the championship games to be held here June 30. The event will be open to all athletes in the United States and Canada. The start will be made north of Evanston, and the finish will be on Marshall Field, adjoining the Chicago University.

The O. K.'s put the "lid" on the Shining Stars when the teams met. The final score was 19 to 4. The Shining Stars would like to arrange a game for Sunday, June 3. Address S. Gurskee, 1308 North Twentieth street.

PROMOTERS REFUND SPECTATORS MONEY

LOS ANGELES, May 28.—Manager McCarey is today refunding money to spectators of the Nelson-Herrera fiasco last Friday night. The crowd had been large and widespread dissatisfaction resulted, especially in view of the fact that money was not immediately refunded. Managers found it necessary to act quickly, and today's action is the result. A line of men is passing before the box-office and the procession strings out three blocks long. No settlement reached yet as to weight money. Nelson claims all.

Baseball Babble

In Rossman and Congalton Cleveland has two fine batsmen.

At the request of the fire and accident insurance companies, vehicles of every description will no longer be allowed on the grounds of the Boston club. The runaway accident on the opening day promoted this order.

Infielder Pete O'Brien of the Ravens was formerly a New York State Leaguer, but for the last four seasons was in the American Association. Cincinnati once had him, but he never came to the dignity of a regular.

"Buck" Freeman is doomed to get the ax from Boston and is only in the game because John Godwin has a bad leg. It is said that Selbach is also doomed. Changes in the Boston team will doubtless be made before long.

The greatest improvement in Detroit's work this spring has been on the base paths. The team is stealing bases and running extra bases on hits in a most gratifying manner. Already Matty McIntyre, for instance, has stolen nearly as many bases this spring as he got all of last year.
